FORMER HEAD INDIANA KU KLUX KLAN

STEPHENSON PROMISES TO CREATE GREAT SENSATION

Serving Life Term For Murder of Girl—Prisoner Says He Is Ready To Tell Secrets of Politics in Hoosier State—Lawyer Says Others Are Not Faring Well in Prison—One Died Suddenly in Yard and Another Killed Self.

David C. Stephenson, former head of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, who is serving a life term in the state prison at Michigan City, for the murder two years ago of Madge Oberholtzer, is being held incommunicado at the prison following his statement that he is ready to talk about Indiana politics.

This situation is not different from the safeguards which have been thrown about Stephenson's tongue for many months, but it was anticipated that his challenge to the political power with whom he formerly hobbled might have stirred them to offer him the opportunity to say his say and have it over with.

Warden J. E. Daly refused admittance to all seeking to interview the prisoner. He explained that it was the prison rules.

Meanwhile Robert H. Moore, Stephenson's attorney, asserted that his client was ready and eager to talk. He said that William H. Reamy, Indianapolis prosecuting attorney, could learn all he needs to know about "political corruption" in Indiana by coming to the state prison and talking to Stephenson.

The determination of Stephenson to tell what he knows, Mr. Moore said, was inspired by the belief that the report which the board of charities will file at the prison next Friday upon its investigation of Stephenson's charges of cruelty, will turn out to be a whitewash. Moore said that also was his own expectation.

When the board of charities releases its report, the state prison board will take up the application of Stephenson for a 90-day parole in which to prepare his appeal from the murder conviction and take steps to conserve his fortune, which he says is being dissipated. On the same day an effort will be made before the Indiana supreme court to obtain a new trial for Stephenson on the technical ground that when he was granted a change of venue at the previous trial, the clerk of court failed to sign the certification.

Mr. Moore will go to Indianapolis

to argue the motion, in fact, indicated he sees nothing to be gained by remaining with his client while the state prison board considers his parole application. On the contrary, he said he is "sick" of the prison investigation and parole proceedings.

Regarding the report of the charities board, which has been forecast unofficially as finding no basis in Stephenson's cruelty charges, Mr. Moore said, "I could have done as well as the board of charities with a big tub of whitewash and a brush, saving the taxpayers the expense of the alleged investigation."

Assuming he was right in his prediction of the county board's report, he said the board was either ignorant of the facts, intimidated, or was deliberately covering up the situation. He said further investigation would show that others than his own client are not faring well in prison.

Mr. Moore charged that a man died suddenly in the prison yard of a stomach ailment several days ago and that another committed suicide. These he commended to the attention of the charities board also.

Policeman's Face Must Fit Helmet in London

London.—No matter what other qualifications a prospective London bobbie has, he must possess a "policeman's face" to get the job.

Provided he comes up to the educational standard required, passes a strict medical examination, and is possessed of a good physique, he still solemnly has to don a bobbie's helmet and parade before his superiors as a final test. If he does not wear the helmet becomingly the chances are he will have to look for a job elsewhere.

Police officials feel that it is most important that bobbies shall not look ridiculous, and maintain the type of helmet worn in London is not a head-dress that everyone can wear and retain his dignity.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Zanesville —When they stepped into water beyond their depth while wading three local girls were drowned here last night in the Muskingum river. They were Gertrude Harbin, 15; Louise Haines, 16 and Leola Conkle, 14, all of Oak avenue, Putnam, a suburb. The girls were among hundreds of others who sought relief from yesterday's heat at Muskingum river beach north of the city.

Hamilton —Coroner Edward Cook asked Mrs. McCormick of Monnette, Missouri today regarding disposition of the body of a man believed to be her son, Carl, 28, killed yesterday at West Chester. Letters indicated Dr. Cook said the man committed suicide by placing his head so that a Big Four train would sever his neck.

Hamilton — First Fourth of July casualty here reports today revealed was Nick Stathis, 33, window washer. He is in the hospital recovering from a bullet wound in the chest. He denied a police theory that he attempted suicide and explained he was preparing a pistol for the Fourth celebration and said he "didn't know it was loaded."

Dayton—Former Deputy U. S. Marshal M. Pratt, will resume his duties at the local office tomorrow, according to Stanley Borthwick, U. S. marshal for this district. In addition to Pratt the district marshal also announced the appointment of Monte Spillman, of Troy, former Miami county sheriff, as deputy marshal to succeed Joel Wagner, let out some time ago because of insufficient funds.

Youngstown —Preliminary hearing of 15 alleged narcotic law violators arrested in wholesale raids this week will begin Friday, United States Commissioner Max Brunswick announced today. Bonds totaling $83,500 were set after the alleged peddlers were arraigned. The leader of the "drug ring," Dr. J. T. Scott, plead not guilty asked a preliminary hearing and was held on $10,000 bond. He was caught after a chase thru Warren streets by deputy sheriffs.

Edna McCoy, the only one to plead guilty was bound over to the federal grand jury on $5,000 bond. All others plead not guilty and bond ranged from $2,500 to $7,500.

BARGAIN DAY IN BASEBALL MASON'S PARK

Newark Team Will Appear For a Double Header With the Eagles Sunday.

Circleville baseball fans will be given a bargain day on Sunday when the fast and hard hitting Newark team will appear at Mason's field for a double header with the Eagle team. After the game played at Reynolds burg two weeks ago the management of the Eagle team gave the aggregation a shaking up and several new faces will be seen in the line-up Sunday.

Among other changes which the fans will welcome was the signing of Catcher Targer, of Chillicothe, who will be in the receiving end of the battery Sunday. Targer needs no introduction to Circleville fans. He is not only a fine catcher and a good hitter, but is a genuine player and should put some pep in the local organization.

George Kanavel will pitch the first game and the other pitcher in promised to be equally good.

On account of the double bill the first game will be called at one o'clock so the fans will not be compelled to invent excuses for being late for supper.

The teams are all enthused and pep ped up and are promising to give the fans a sure enough treat Sunday by winning both games of the double header.

As this is the first at home game for a month and a bargain day double header, a large crowd is expected, one in fact which will tax the capacity of the ample field.

Camden, N. J.—Statistics made public recently on the volume of automobile traffic handled by the Delaware river bridge linking Camden and Philadelphia indicate that the popularity of this route may liquidate the debt of this structure from three to eight years ahead of the estimated period.

The figures made public by the Delaware River Bridge commission show that 6,292,653 automobiles used this route during the first ten months.

It had been estimated that the traffic for the year would not exceed 6,000,000 machines.

Try to Make Travel

Safe for Goldfish

Washington.—Travel is going to be made safe for goldfish if the government can do it.

Acting on complaints by fish breeders about the heavy mortality rate of their charges while proceeding in cans via express toward private bowls, the bureau of fisheries has undertaken a serious scientific investigation. It already has some results to announce.

Lack of air in the water, at first suspected of causing the high death rate, doesn't seem to be important. The goldfish is hardy, and when his water isn't changed he swims up to the top and takes a breath of straight air from time to time. But the dirt that gets into the water seems to present a serious danger, and the scientists are working to determine just how much he can stand. When it finishes it hopes to be able to lay out travel schedules which will enable the breeders to deliver more of their funny ornaments alive.

NATIONAL TRACK AND FIELD MEET

Lincoln, Neb., June 29.—(UP.)—Vanguard of the nation's track and field stars, who will compete in the National A. A. U. track and field meet here July 1, 2 and 3, are expected to start arriving tomorrow.

Hundreds of athletes, representing athletic clubs and colleges from every section of the country, have been entered in this year's meet—a meet that is considered one of the chief tests for Olympic eligibility.

Considerable attention this year is being given to the athletic club entries. Main attention will be given the Olympic Club of Los Angeles, the Los Angeles A. C., the Hollywood A. C. and the Illinois Athletic Club.

Athletes on these squads will represent the best of the collegians for the past few years from the West Coast and from the middlewest. The Chicago A. A. U. will be entered but owing to the club's poor showing in the central division A. A. U. meet in Chicago it is not considered a likely team winner.

John Abernethy, of this city, will be a contestant in the St. Xavier College team.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

Of Mrs. Curtis Scott Unsolved by Family and Police.

Local police, the family and intimate friends of Mrs. Curtis Scott who disappeared from her home in East Franklin street June 15, are at a loss to explain her whereabouts. On that date Mrs. Scott left a note at her home saying that she had gone up town and one person is reported to have seen her going in that direction about 10 o'clock in the morning. There was nothing unusual in her attitude prior to her disappearance and she had never mentioned leaving home. Several meager clues, such as the disappearance of a revolver, gold pencil and glasses are being worked on but it is thought that she took none of the rest of her belongings.

Mrs. Scott was not in the best of health.

Police have notified the surrounding community of her disappearance and any information will be appreciated.

She was the wife of Curtis Scott, an employee of The Scioto Valley Traction Company. Two daughters, Misses Louise and Geneva, are at home.

Grain Combines Reducing Costs

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Harvesting costs are reduced so materially by the use of the combined harvester-thresher, that this machine is rapidly replacing other harvesting machinery in the Great plains east of the Rocky mountains, according to a study just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Montana agricultural colleges. The advantages of this machine are in the lower cost of cutting and threshing grain, reduction in labor requirements and in shortening the harvesting and threshing periods.

East of the Rocky mountains a type of combine is in use which is considerably smaller than the kind formerly seen in California and in the Northwest states. Most of the new machines have a 15 or 16-foot cut, having auxiliary engines, and are drawn by tractors.

Reduces Amount of Labor.

Eight-foot combines harvested 275 acres of grain on the average, and 16-foot machines averaged 682 acres last season. Except where the grain was very heavy, the yield per acre had no appreciable effect on the rate of cutting. The minimum crew for a 15-foot or 16-foot combine is two men, not including grain haulers. Similar machines having a power drive from the tractor are sometimes operated by one man. It is estimated that the combine reduces the amount of labor necessary for harvesting and threshing in the Great plains from about 3.6 man hours per acre for cutting with the binder and threshing with a stationary machine to about 0.75 man hours per acre.

Operators of combines estimate the life of the machine to be about eight years. Their first cost ranges from about $1,000 for small machines to $2,500 for the larger sizes. Extended use of the machine during the harvesting season is essential to a low harvesting cost per acre. When the farmer has only a small acreage to cut, the investment and replacement charges of a combine may be too high.

To Make Combine Profitable.

In order to make the combine a profitable harvesting implement, the acreage to be cut must be greater than ordinarily cut with one binder. Harvesting with the combine, says the department, is not cheaper than with the binder and thresher unless 100 or more acres are available for cutting. There must be 150 or more acres available for cutting before costs with the combine fall below costs with a header and stationary thresher. This reckoning takes into account only the direct cash expenses ordinarily paid by the farmer, and the necessary replacement charges for the machines. The minimum acreage for more economical harvesting depends somewhat on the size of combine used.

Farmers in the Great plains allow grain to stand for five or seven days after it is ripe enough for binding before they begin harvesting with a combine. This unavoidable delay increases the risk from weather and shattering. Few farmers, however, consider the losses from shattering or bleaching to be serious in this area. Harvesting losses attributable to the machine itself are generally less with the combine than with other machines. Tests made show that properly adjusted combines separate grain as efficiently as many stationary threshers. Losses due to heads left on the ground in fields on which observations were made averaged 2.6 per cent of the total yield for the combine, 3.3 per cent for the header, and 6.1 per cent for the binder. A condensed report of the survey is contained in a preliminary report which may be obtained upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Agricultural Notes

The best milk is that which is kept clean, cool, and covered.

To keep the loafer hens from eating up the profits, why not eat up the loafer hens?

Speaking of efficiency on the farm, consider the sheep as a triple-product machine—wool, lamb, soil fertility.

The farmer who grows his food and feed at home doesn't need to gamble quite so much on a questionable cash crop.

The value of the vegetables produced on 1-20th of an acre, which is the size of a small family garden, is about $50, according to a Cornell bulletin on gardening.

Buck lambs are now penalized so drastically on all the larger markets that one cannot afford to raise them, while tails on sheep went out of fashion when wet pastures came in.

Horses have tender mouths, which are sometimes made sore enough by coarse stiff hay to keep them from eating freely. When such hay is cut pretty fine it is much less apt to cause this trouble.

Sunday School Lesson

(©, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for July 3

SAUL CHOSEN KING

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 10:17-25: 11:12-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?

JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul, the First King of Israel.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Opportunities for Leadership.

The period of Judges ended with Samuel's administration. This lesson shows us the transition from the rule by the judges to the monarchy. For a comprehensive view of the transition it will be well to make a survey of chapters eight to eleven.

I. The People Demand a King (8:1-9).

1. Their reasons for this demand.

(1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age; (2) the unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors. In this Samuel committed a great blunder, for the office of judge was not hereditary. (3) The desire to be like other nations. The surrounding nations had a king as their leader. They wanted a king who would go out and fight their battles (v. 20).

2. Samuel's behavior under this trial (vv. 6-9). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Even though Samuel's blunders in part brought on this trouble he did the wise thing in taking it to the Lord in prayer. The Lord comforted him by assuring him that this rejection was not merely his rejection, but the rejection of the kingdom of God.

II. Samuel Tells of the Manner of the Kings (vv. 10-18).

He shows them that the king will be very exacting and arbitrary in his dealing with them.

1. He will take their sons and make them to serve in the army and do all kinds of hard work on his farm and in his house. He will make slaves of their daughters also.

2. He will take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers, and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that he will take the tenth part of the produce that remains and give to them.

III. Samuel's Protest Disregarded by the People (vv. 19-22).

Having made up their minds they deliberately shut their eyes to the truth and rushed madly into the experiment.

IV. The King Providentially Pointed Out (9:1-10:16).

Saul was sent by his father to search for the asses that had wandered away. This was quite natural. While Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, at the same time God's sovereign purpose was being carried out. Although difficult to understand, God carries forth His sovereign purpose without interfering with man's freedom.

V. The King Chosen at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

The Lord had already pointed out to Samuel who should be king and Saul had been anointed. Let us observe:

1. Why Saul was chosen. If they would have a king the Lord would give them the one best suited to fill the place. He was from Benjamin, a small tribe, which would prevent undue rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, the leading tribes of Israel. He was also chosen because of his personal fitness (v. 23).

2. How Saul was chosen. The method was by lot. Samuel called them together before the Lord, and before the lot was cast he again remonstrated with them against such action. He showed them the base ingratitude of their rejection of such a God and King who had done so much for them, and gave them a chance to forego their rash demand.

3. How the king was received by the people. Saul knew that the Lord had chosen him, but through modesty and fear he shrank from the responsibility. When he was brought forth Samuel presented him to the people, assuring them that Saul was the Lord's choice.

VI. The King Confirmed at Gilgal (ch. 11).

Soon after the election at Mizpeh the Ammonites made a desperate demand upon the men of Jabesh-Gilead. Saul hearing of it hastily summoned the tribes together for war and won a remarkable victory. As he thus proved his ability the people wished to punish the sons of Belial, but Saul forbade them. Samuel took advantage of this auspicious situation and called all the people together at Gilgal where they formally crowned him their king.

The Life

To apprehend the life that is to be we must learn to think more largely and sacrificially of the life that is now. We must enlarge the scope and measure of today, must identify today with what we call eternity.—Charles Cuthbert Hall.

Moving Forward

To move forward in life, you do not need to be forward in conduct, but you must keep your face to the front, and see your objective.—The Gilead.

NO BAN ON CORN

Washington, June 29.—(UP.)—The steady and triumphal procession of Ohio roasting ears to the Detroit market will not be interrupted.

This is the gist of a decision by the United States department of agriculture. About the time the roasting ear season opened certain enterprising Michiganders became seized with a great fear of the corn borer and they petitioned the United States department of agriculture to tighten the restrictions so that green corn could not move from Ohio into Michigan.

The department officials considered the matter at a conference here, and their conclusion has just been announced, as follows:

"At a conference held at the department of agriculture to consider the necessity of placing restrictions on the movement of green corn within the area now quarantined on account of the European corn borer, it was decided that no such action is warranted at the present time.

"The conference was called and presided over by Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal board. Opportunity was given for those present to state their views on the subject and letters and telegrams from interested persons not present, were read and discussed. After a thorough consideration of the various points of view it was deemed unnecessary at the present time to place any restriction on the movement of green corn within the quarantined area."

C. OF C. OFFICERS

Nominated For Coming Year At Meeting Last Night.

Tuesday evening the Chamber of Commerce nominating committee announced the following nominations for officers for the coming year before the Chamber in its weekly meeting: For President, Frank A. Lynch, W. G. Hamilton and George M. Fitzpatrick; Vice President, Joseph R. Noecker, Walker Baughman and Robert Wiley; Treasurer, Fred R. Nicholas, Clark Will and Christian Schwarz; Directors, S. G. Rader, T. F. Jeffries, I. F. Snyder, G. I. Nickerson, T. O. Gilliland, Walter Marion, E. Sensenbrenner, K. J. Herrmann, Arthur Moore, H. W. Plum, E. W. Lutz, F. E. Barnhill, H. G. Stevenson, E. S. Neuding; Scout, R. L. Brehmer.

One President, Vice President, Treasurer and four Directors are to be chosen by the Chamber at its next meeting on Tuesday, July 5.

At the same meeting complete reports of the year's accomplishments, financial standing, etc., of the President, Secretary and Treasurer will be read and will appear later in The Herald. These reports will no doubt prove surprising to Chamber of Commerce "knockers" who are not aware of the good done by the institution in Circleville and the surrounding community.

Bird With Four Legs

The discovery in British Guiana of a bird with four legs was announced recently. The crested hoazin, opisthocomus cristatus, the only survivor of a race of birds, inhabits the most secluded parts of the forests of South America.

Award Long Delayed

Forty-five years after he accompanied Maj. Gen. Adolphus Washington Greely on his famous arctic expedition, Brig. Gen. David L. Brainerd was recently awarded a medal in recognition of his services by the American Geographical society.

SUES FOR RE-

MOVING FLOYD COLLINS' BODY

Brownsville, Ky., June 28.—Harry B. Thomas, Horse Cave dentist, was indicted by the Edmonson grand jury today on a charge of "mutilating the grave of Floyd Collins." Trial was set for the November term of court.

Dr. Thomas, who purchased Crystal Cave from the Collins family some months ago, is being sued for $50,000 damages for removing the casket from the grave to the interior of the cave, allegedly for exhibition purposes. The Collins brothers also have asked for an injunction to restrain the dentist from exhibiting the casket.

COOPERATIVE MARKETING
OF LIVESTOCK

The Leaders are in Chicago
Where Problems are to be Very Freely Discussed.

A number of leaders of Ohio's cooperative livestock marketing organizations are in Chicago this week attending the sessions of the American Institute of Cooperation, according to word received from the officers of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation. Study livestock cooperation is being emphasized this week, the second of the four weeks of the institute sessions.

Prominent on this week's program,
according to the announcement are
L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio
Wool Growers' Cooperative association, E. C. Rector, director of the Ohio Livestock Cooperative association, M. L. Howell, manager of the Ohio Poultry Producers' Cooperative association and George Henning of Ohio State university's college of agriculture.

Mr. Henning and Mr. Rector are scheduled to tell some of the experiences and problems in livestock marketing in Ohio. During the week
Ohio experience will be compared to that of more than 30 other states.
Mr. Howell will tell of the work being done in cooperative poultry marketing in this state.

Mr. Palmer is to lead a discussion on problems of wool marketing. On Saturday he will meet a group of wool marketing leaders from all parts of the country to consider the combination of state and local wool
cooperatives into five to seven district pools. Should this plan, which has been discussed for some time among wool growers, go into effect, the Ohio warehouse at Columbus would be made the headquarters for grading and storage of wools in this section.

CLEVE RADER
HEADS BUCK-EYE
TRAPSHOOTERS

Will Enter Team at Grand
American Tournament
at Vandalia.

J. C. Rader, of this city, heads the list in the Buck-Eye Traps Shooters association with a record of 1073 broke out of 1100, or an average of .9754.

This is the greatest year in the history of the state, and fifteen marksmen average 95% or better.
Texas comes next with seven. Rader visited the Ohio State shoot and broke 150 straight in the A class race
to the tie-up with Charlie Young, the Springfield star. Charlie Bogert, Sandusky, takes second honors to date. Bogert has shot at 3500 clays, been fortunate in hearing the cry or
"dead" 3410 times which gives him
a mark of .9742. Charlie Young, the 1926 Grand American winner, is holding down third place with 97 flat on 3970 clays. George Statler, the brilliant Piqua gunner, closely follows
Young with .9651. John Taylor, Newark, tops the professional gunners of the state with the great average of
.9752. The Buck-Eye state will enter
a strong team at the Grand American tournament which will be held at Vandalia the last week in August.

The quintette will be composed of
S. D. Geddes, Harrisburg, the 1927
Ohio State champion, Charles Young
Springfield, Henry Shick, Huntsville,
Charlie Bogert, Sandusky and C. R.
Swartz, Kenton, Ohio, have a great chance to cop the Grand American State team honors this year. Last year the premier "five" that represented the state took third place.

were accompanied by their mothers, Mrs. Myrtle Drake and Mrs. E. B.
Gilliland, of Van Wert.

Leap-Year ReckoningQuite Simple Matter

The year 1928 is a leap year, as it is divisible by four without remainder.
There has been no change in the calendar for the last two centuries. As the exact length of a year, determined by the earth's revolution around the sun, is a little less than 365 1/4
days, the old Julian calendar, giving a leap year every four years,
was inexact. A new calendar, called the Gregorian, was proposed and adopted by most Christian nations in the sixteenth century or later, to rectify this error. This calendar provides for 97 leap years in each 400 years. The only difference from the Julian calendar is that century years,
such as 1600, 1700, 1800, 1900, etc.,
are not leap years unless they are divisible by 400 without remainder.
Thus 1600 and 2000 are leap years, while 1700, 1800 and 1900 are not
leap years.

Mysterious Rays Reach Us

Wonderful discoveries are not unlikely from present study of the Milliken "cosmic rays," which are now known to bombard the earth from space and which can penetrate nine feet of lead. Science suggests the possibility that man may be able to harness this "free energy" as one solution of the world's work problem.—

CENTENARY OF BOATING ON OHIO CANALS

Old Vessel May be Raised
and Sailed to the Scene of
Its Former Glory.

Fourteen years ago when the centennial of Perry's victory on Lake Erie was about to be celebrated, investigation proved that the commodore's old flag ship used on that historic occasion, was lying at the bottom of the bay at Erie, Pennsylvania
where it sank soon after the notable battle—in recoverable condition, and the hull was raised, reconstructed, rigged and sailed to the scene of its former glory to be a feature of the centennial occasion.

And now that the centennial of an important peace-time event is to be celebrated, the sailing of the first canal boat on Ohio's system of canals, it is proposed to recover the canal boat that had this honor. It was on July 3, 1827, that "The Ohio"
a canal boat bearing freight and passengers started from Akron on the newly completed first section of the Ohio & Erie canal, for Cleveland and reached Cleveland the following day.

Forty-four locks had to be negotiated and at every considerable port enroute, brief stops were made to receive popular ovations, the booming of cannon, speeches by officials and the cheering of the people. All who took part in that notable event or saw it, are of course gone, and the system of transportation then installed has been almost completely superseded by other and better systems but it served its day and generation well.

The hull of the old Ohio has been found in the mud of a basin in Coven-try township, Summit county, where it was towed and sunk when no longer serviceable, and an attempt is to be made to float and restore it temporarily at least, to a navigable condition, for use in the centennial celebration.

A few years ago a portion of the stern of an old canal boat could be seen projecting above the mud in an abandoned and partly filled-up section of the canal near the foot of Mound street, Columbus. It may have been a contemporary craft with "The Ohio"
and its framework might be recovered and reconstructed should occasion require.—J. H. Galbraith.

BIBLE ANTEDATED
BY MANUSCRIPTS

Older Than Papyrus Found in Tomb of St. Cuthbert.

Washington.—Biblical manuscripts older even than the celebrated Stony-hurst gospel according to St. John,
said to have been found in the tomb of St. Cuthbert, who died in 687, are on exhibition in the United States.

One of the collections, bequeathed to the nation by Charles L. Freer of Detroit, is in the Freer Gallery of Art here. The other, comprising a few papyrus fragments, is at the University of Michigan.

The "Washington Manuscripts," as the Freer collection is known, include one of the oldest Greek versions of the Bible known. Its date is placed in the fourth century by Dr. E. A. Lowe, Oxford lecturer, and research investigator of the Carnegie institutions.

Considerable attention has been drawn to the "Washington Manuscripts." Doctor Lowe pointed out, because they carry the following extra verses after Mark 16:14:

"But they defended themselves,
saying that this age of lawlessness
and unbelief is under the power of Satan, who does not permit those made impure by evil spirits to comprehend the truth and power of God.
Therefore reveal now thy righteousness, they said to Christ. And Christ replied to them that the limit of the years of the power of Satan has been made full, but other dread events are near at hand, and in behalf of those who had sinned I was delivered unto death in order that they may return to the truth and no longer sin, to the end that they may inherit the spiritual and imperishable glory of righteousness, which is in heaven."

In addition to the Greek parchment manuscript, of the gospels,
Psalms, Deuteronomy, Joshua and fragments of the letters of Paul,
the collection includes a few pages
of ancient papyrus bearing parts of the minor prophets. All were found in Egypt. Freer acquired them through a dealer.

Embarrassing Answer

Mr. and Mrs. will be sufficient identification of two Irvington parents who have a great amount of pride in their bright-eyed little daughter.

Recently they took the little girl
with them on a visit to Gas City,
where they formerly lived.

While there she was the center of attraction.

"Where is mamma's girl?" she was asked.

Quickly she responded by patting herself on the head.

"Whose girl are you?" was another question.

"Mamma's," was the answer.

"Well, where is daddy's girl?" came another question.

"Down at his office," she replied.

French Thrift

One of the outstanding characteristics of French thrift is the degree to which holdings of bonds and stocks are disseminated throughout the various elements of the population. A recent report of the federation of holders of securities shows that state securities are held by 1,320,000 persons and railroad securities by 950,000. These figures seem the more extraordinary when it is recalled that in France there are less than 12,000,000 families.

Curious Bird

More than 300 different kinds of birds were brought from South America by Ludlow Griscom of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. One of the most curious in the collection is the motmot. "This bird," says Griscom, "bites its own tail. It is green and so closely resembles the color of the leaves that one can only see it by looking for the side-to-side movement of its tail, which resembles a pendulum in regularity."

Sea Elephants Going Fast

Sea elephants, which at one time abounded in large numbers off the coast of California and Lower California, were in 1912 estimated as numbering only 150 on the island of Gaudalupe.
A recent expedition from San Diego to the same island found the herd to consist of 450. The government of Mexico is doing its utmost to preserve this species.

Line Wrecked by Tree

Electric power lines are subject to all sorts of attacks. This spring a large tree, frozen upright in moving

three cross-river cables near Suncock, N. H. Electricity for the nearby towns was routed over another line temporarily so that service was not interrupted.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period
in France beginning about March, 1793, when the revolutionary tribunal
was appointed, and ending in July, 1794, with the overthrow of Robes-

time a great number of persons, prin-

Synthetic Sleep

The Germans have invented a sleepmachine which nerve specialists commend to insomnia victims. It is a small box that emits a humming sound like a hive of bees. It is timed to hum for 40 minutes and then to fade out, figuratively speaking. The principle of it is the same as that of mother's rocking chair with its wordless songs.—Los Angeles Times.

FRANK DAVIS

WOMAN'S ACT THAT SAVED KING'S LIFE

History refers to the unfortunate inauguration of masquerades at the court of Charles VI as the "Burning Ballet." This famous dance was held January 20, 1393, in connection with a festival in the royal palace at Paris. The desire of a certain gentleman to create a sensation by having a dance of wild men to please the women resulted in the selection of King Charles and four of his nobles to participate in the revel.

They had themselves sewn up in tight-fitting linen suits covered with resin, on which a quantity of tow was glued. In this guise they performed their weird dance. The duke of Orleans, in attempting to discover their identity, approached too near one of them; with a lighted taper. The tow caught fire and the flames quickly enveloped the luckless performers. The king was saved from death by the presence of mind of one of the women, who enveloped him in the lengthy train attached to her gown. The shock, however, proved too great, and he never fully recovered.—Kansas City Star.

HAMILTON MAN TO BE HATED OR LOVED

How they hated him, and yet no public figure, save Washington, was so adored. Men were either Alexander Hamilton's frenzied enemies or else his unasking followers. His flaming personality left no middle ground. From the day that he came to America from the West Indies, sent by charitable subscriptions to receive an education, genius set him apart from his fellows.

A boy of twenty, serving a gun, even the reserved Washington was won to him at once, and made him his military secretary; generals received his counsel eagerly, and congress covered before the lash of his tongue and pen.

Born out of wedlock, he moved as royally as a prince of the blood; fashioned with the exquisiteness of a Greek carving, his face was only saved from beauty by its strength; and that proud heiress, Betty Schuyler, had given him her hand in gladness.—From "Sons of the Eagle," by George Creel.

"Collette," Their Mascot

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

HAD Paula been a tiny black Persian kitten like the one in the basket beside her, she would have purred, too. She was so happy to have finally succeeded in buying the pet she was now taking home on the Long Island train with her that she could actually have purred with joy. For many weeks she had been looking for a small black kitten and only that day while out at lunch had come across this adorable one.

Having nothing whatever in the office that she and her brother occupied with which to make the kitten's basket soft and warm, Paula had been obliged to use one of the office supply towels.

She had already named the kitten after the small patented article for which she and her brother had acquired the agency, which was already bringing them a decent living. Little "Collette" was to be their mascot.

Paula peeped into the cozy basket and as she did so a small girl sat down in the seat beside her. The man who had found the seat for the child found one for himself in front. There was no slightest doubt that the small girl was feeling very fearful about something. Paula heard an occasional trembling breath as if she were making a brave effort to stifle her emotions.

Paula's first thought was to make an effort to amuse the little girl, and she very cautiously opened the lid of "Collette's" basket. The kitten was curled up into a perfect puff ball of silky black fur.

"Oh!" cried the little girl with startling interest, "a little kitty!" She snuggled against Paula and leaned her head down so that she could almost rub her cheek against the kitten. "My daddy promised me one for my birthday and we have tried all day to get one and couldn't get—a—a s-single kitten." With that the tears burst forth.

"What would your daddy say to me if I gave you this one?" questioned Paula. "I should love to make you a present of it but you must name it 'Collette.' Do you think—"

"Oh-h!" gasped the delighted child. "I would just love—"

The man in front turned and entered into this strange conversation. "My dear Tots—you mustn't let the lady give you her own kitten."

"I should love to give the kitten to your little girl. I can easily get another tomorrow, as he is one of a big litter. Please let her have it—children's disappointments are so very real to them."

The train was pulling in at Forest Hills station and Paula pressed the basket with "Collette" in it into the happy child's arms. "Be sure you name her 'Collette,'" she said swiftly, and only the searching eyes of the all-wise kitten saw the look in Paula's own eyes as she bade swift farewell to her pet.

Paula felt forlorn as she walked home from the station with the two pink china bowls she had bought for "Collette's" milk and boiled fish. She recalled the very happy light in the child's eyes when she accepted the kitten and that cheered her a bit.

And if Tots Blaine was treasuring her kitten tremendously, so also was John Blaine treasuring it because it was the golden thread whereby his heart had been tugged into heretofore unknown regions.

And John Blaine's only hope for the future was that he might again see the girl on the train so that he could easily and without any offense thank her again.

But "Collette," in her cozy basket, had other plans for the bringing together of a couple in a more speedy manner.

Of course "Collette" knew that John Blaine was not the father of Tots, nor in any way, shape or form tied up matrimonially. He was just Tots' best uncle. So plans proceeded when "Collette" almost refused to come out of her cozy basket after arriving at her new home and being made much of by an animal-loving family. She went back and forth in her basket, went round and round in cat fashion on that office towel which Paula had used for a cushion for her, and it was not until John Blaine himself seemed to grasp the idea that she seemed pleased and purred loudly.

Blaine took the towel into his own possession and first thing in the morning trailed to the office whose name was written in red letters thereon. He mustn't lose any time in returning it—not in the least that he cared about the towel-supply people—but he did not want to miss a moment more of life without knowing Paula.

She was sitting beside a great desk occupied by a man whom Blaine instantly disliked, then as quickly admired when he found it was her brother.

"I had to return this towel," said Blaine. "I didn't want you to get into trouble for losing it," and he grinned openly.

GOOD MORALS REQUIRED IN SALESMANSHIP

Does Not Involve Series of Tricks and Snares to Induce People to Buy.

Likening the morals pertaining to salesmanship to the twelfth verse in the seventh chapter of Matthew, Harvey R. Young, advertising director of The Dispatch, addressed members attending the International Advertising association convention at Denver, Colorado, Sunday evening from the pulpit of Cameron Methodist church on the subject of "Morals of Salesmanship."

"There are several definitions for the words 'morals' and 'ethics,' but so far as morals pertaining to salesmanship are concerned, the Biblical verse, 'Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them for this is law' and the prophet offers a plain and simpler definition than those found in dictionaries," Young declared.

Salesmanship and advertising are closely linked together. Successful selling as well as advertising must be built on confidence. When confidence is destroyed business will suffer," he continued, pointing out that two classes of salesmen, the class which disparages a competitive salesman and the class which makes sales thru misrepresentation, destroys confidence.

"The greatest sales manager the world has ever known was our Savior Jesus Christ, who more than 2000 years ago was the forerunner of truth and with his staff of salesman, the twelve apostles, laid the foundation, for the moral upbuilding of the world, which will go on forever.

"Good salesmanship no longer involves a series of tricks and snares to induce people to buy."

Many of the failures of sales people of today is due to the fact that they neither develop their possibilities nor have any future object in view, according to Mr. Young, who further declared that a salesman to be successful must possess an inflexible purpose.

"When a man loses faith in himself—his mainspring has run down—the rest of his work is useless. He is letting time pass without making a record," he concluded.

MOONSHINE IS CAPTURED ON EAST MAIN

Out in front stood a brand new Essex car and in this was a case of sixteen pints of the same stuff packed securely in a pasteboard container. A lap robe was thrown over the case to hide it from view. The whisky and car were confiscated by the police and was taken to the city hall.

Evans was placed under arrest and appeared in court this morning pleading guilty to possession of intoxicating liquor and was given a fine of $300 and costs amounting to $311.20 which he paid and was discharged. Evans was represented by M. C. Seyfert Jr. The Essex machine which was in Mr. Evans' possession was not confiscated as the American Finance company claims ownership.

AMUSEMENTS

Director Frank Lloyd has made another remarkable picture for Paramount with the inspired Esther Ralston, Gary Cooper, Einar Hanson and Norman Trevor.

"Children of Divorce," now playing at the Met theater, tears a new slash in the veil covering the evils of modern divorce and pictures in bold colors life in the youthful ranks of the wealthy social class.

The cast headed by Clara Bow and Esther Ralston, both of whom are starred, and Einar Hanson and handsome young Gary Cooper, give wonderfully fine consistent performances. Too much cannot be said in praise of Miss Bow as the girl who forces marriage on the man of her choice (Cooper) in spite of his love for Esther Ralston. Miss Ralston, in Esther Ralston, in turn, as lovely, dignified Jean Waddington, suffers her disappointment contagiously as she found ready sympathy flowing from the audience that saw the picture on the opening night here.

Miss Bow, Miss Ralston and Mr. Cooper in their big scene where Jean learns that Kitty and Ted have been married during a night of revelry, rise to the historic heights as actresses and actor. Theirs were parts that might well have been given more experienced players, but their youth stood them in good stead and even added to the appeal of the characterizations.

Taken all in all, "Children of Divorce" couldn't possibly have been other than a good picture. Owen Johnson wrote the story. Remember his "Stover at Yale" and "The Enemy Sex?" Frank Lloyd translated it to the screen. The four leading players and a fine supporting cast carry it thru and when one has Norman Trevor, Hedda Hopper, Edward Martindel and Julia Swayne Gordon in support, you have nothing less than the best that's to be obtained!

Country Without Trees

Iceland is assigned to the Western hemisphere. It is a large, volcanic and treeless island in the North Atlantic ocean. Its most northern point is 66 degrees 33 minutes north latitude. Its estimated area is 40,497 square miles, so that Iceland is somewhat larger than Ireland. The population numbers 95,000. The capital of Iceland is Reykjavik, containing a population of about 20,000.

Mythology's Meaning

Mythology may be described as a collection of fables and traditions referring to the forces of nature, to national heroes and to the pagan gods. The nature-myths are primitive attempts to explain the processes of nature, and may be looked upon as the beginning of natural science. The heromys are akin to sacred mythology.

New Idea in "Movies"

At eighty-six years of age, Mrs. Sarah Patek of San Francisco, Calif., is the star in a one-reel moving picture. Relatives in England wanted to see her, but she was unable to visit them, so she arranged to have a moving picture taken of her in her home, to be sent to England. Supporting the star were her four surviving children, ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

CODFISH LIVERS
RIVAL SUN RAYS

Scientists Point Benefits to Eggs Derived From Use of Sea Food.

Philadelphia.—Shades of Apollo and Izak Walton! Here is science claiming that the only rival of the sun is found in "a poor fish."

We know that Sir Walter Scott sang once to the effect that "It's no' fish ye're buying—it's men's lives." We remember also the lines of an old Scotch song, a fishmonger's call in which a similar prophetic note was sounded. "Wha'll buy my caller her-rin?" the cry runs. "Ye little ken their worth."

One hundred years after these words rang out in the chill, foggy air of Scottish markets, scientists step from their laboratories long enough to tell us that, next to the sun, "desparin' wives and mithers" must depend upon a fish to maintain the stalwart limbs and stout backbone of the nation's youth.

In those few remaining regions of the earth where clothes are incidental, if not negligible, where the sun is given its chance to feed the bodies of men, we find, as a rule, that the natives of such Edens are straight as an arrow, well formed, strong, and happy. It is when we reach civilization that we encounter frequent deformities, bowed legs, gawky knees, bulging wrists and ankles.

The fact that we free to the sun only the few square inches of our face and the backs of ungloved hands is a primary factor in the general tendency in this and other civilized countries toward rachitic conditions. The average infant is too much over-clothed when lying in the sun to derive its full benefits. Sun porches are light, cheery, and warm; but unless their glass is of a special type none of the helpful ultra-violet rays of the sun make their way inside.

Without sufficient sunlight or without sufficient supply in another form of the factor that is conveyed by the sun's rays, our children develop rickets, that starvation of bone structures that leaves them soft and flexible, producing various forms of deformity, including soft teeth, misshapen skulls, jaws and skeletal structures, and even constricted chests.

The elements that give proper strength to bones and teeth are calcium and phosphorus. These two elements cannot be utilized in bone growth, however, unless a third factor is present, just as a pile of coal is useless without ignition to convert it into heat.

Like Bones Made of Rubber.

This factor is vitamin D. Without this vitamin, calcium phosphate cannot be deposited sufficiently in the bony structures of the body. Although bones keep right on growing, the unfortunate child to whom they belong might as well have a rubber skeleton if the vitamin deficiency is not corrected.

The action of the ultra-violet rays of the sun upon one of the fatty components of our skin produces vitamin D or its physiological equivalent, according to researches conducted by Hulschinsky, Hess, Shipley, and other scientists.

Sunlight, then, is the natural protection against rickets.

But civilized man does not lead a natural life. Our mode of dressing and dwelling does not permit natural living. And it is not likely that we shall emulate the Polynesian soon by discarding our clothing for bared existence under a beneficent sun.

When it is known how important vitamin D is to life and health, it seems an odd prank of nature that this factor is absent in practically all foods used for human consumption except the liver of codfish. Probably nature felt that she was taking ample care of us by giving us sunlight. Then she permitted man to discover for himself how prodigally she provides for his welfare by storing this valuable factor in one of his commonest sources of food.

One Theory of Scientists.

Just how the cod manages to distinguish himself above all other animals of earth, sea and sky by monopolizing the storage of vitamin D is not clearly determined. One theory of scientists has it that the ultra-violet rays of the sun penetrate below the surface of the ocean and so irradiate the cod. This would presuppose that the cod's skin is especially sensitized to these rays as man's skin seems to be. Just as if both cod and man were photographic negatives which, upon exposure to ultra-violet rays, produce a positive effect when developed in the chemistry of the body.

It is more likely, however, that the cod gets his sunlight by eating it. Study of the habits of the cod in Norwegian waters and in the waters off Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Maine have strengthened this theory. F. F. Berg of the Squibb laboratories watched the early spring surge of thousands of cod to the shallower, warmer waters near the Lofoten islands, where they came to spawn.

At this period of a cod's life he develops a ravenous appetite. And it is what nature provides to satisfy that hunger that offers another theory in explanation of the fact that cod liver oil is the most prolific source of vitamin D known to man.

Piscatorial Drama.

This piscatorial drama is very much like the "house that Jack built." Great shoals of herring are loosed by nature into the waters near Norway and our northeastern coast just as the cod feels these pangs of hunger. So here is the cod that gives us vitamins. Here are the squids that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us the vitamins. Here are the mosses and sea plants that are eaten by the squid that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us vitamins.

Day after day, week upon week, the sun pours its rays down upon these sea plants. The squid themselves do little more than float around near the surface of the sea, absorbing still more ultra-violet rays. From that point on it is obvious how, theoretically, the codfish acquires his vast store of vitamin D by literally eating sunshine.

It has been only a few years since the existence of vitamin D was recognized. In fact, its identification came about through experiments by Prof. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university with cod-liver oil. From that moment, the medical profession moved with reinforced courage against the threat of rickets. The late Dr. Emmet Holt, at the time of his death, was stressing the importance of dependence of sound health in adult life upon building bones, blood and muscles in childhood.

Would Reduce Teeth Ills.

It is claimed that, if the perfect condition of bone, blood and muscle in new-born children had been maintained in the last century through sufficient vitamin D supply, dental statistics would not show that 98 per cent of the people of the United States have imperfect teeth. There would have been less excuse for rheumatism and heart and kidney troubles, which are, in fact, after-effects of some local infection.

Authorities are urging that the growing generation of children be granted the heritage that is their right under the sun. Plenty of sunlight is advocated, but, at best, the sun alone under modern living conditions cannot assure sufficient vitamin D for a stout-limbed posterity.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, states in a recent article:

"One of the greatest discoveries of the last five years has been the establishing of the fact that cod-liver oil has specific properties in preventing the development of bone diseases of infancy and in aiding proper growth. Under the unfeigned encouragement of the medical profession, child welfare agencies have preached the doctrine of liberal administration of cod-liver oil in infancy." Doctor Fishbein's article also stated that the council on pharmacy and chemistry of the American Medical association agreed upon advising "routine administration of cod-liver oil to all growing infants provided the product had been standardized as to its actual potency."

Every Wharf Had Its Keg.

Long before we had knowledge of vitamins, cod-liver oil was used. Coast dwellers and seafaring folk drank it in quantities as a means for withstanding exposure to cold weather and as a tonic. Their method of extracting it was crude. Every wharf had its keg sitting in the sun, the barrel full of cod livers, the oil separating and rising to the top where it was skimmed off.

From a modest position as a by-product of the fishing industry, the securing of livers for their oil is assuming an important and valuable major position. It is estimated that the world's output of cod-liver oil in 1925 was approximately 2,500,000 gallons, or 94,000 barrels of 30 gallons each. When it is known that it takes about six tons of codfish to yield enough liver to produce one barrel of cod-liver oil, some idea can be gathered of the gain that thousands of fishing families experience as a result of the laboratory discovery of vitamin D.

More Vitamin A Than Milk.

While cod-liver oil is essential chiefly for its content of vitamin D, the fact that it is also a rich storehouse of vitamin A is by way of being a bonus that nature has thrown in for good measure. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance against pulmonary infections, colds, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and the like. It is as essential as vitamin D, and the complete absence of one or the other generally results fatally. Vitamin A, unlike vitamin D, is present in other foods, principally in butter from cows that have been fed on green food, in milk and cream, and in green vegetables such as spinach.

When it is known, however, that one pint of cod-liver oil is as rich in vitamin A as at least 1,200 pints of the best grade A milk, the greater concentration of the factor in oil becomes apparent.

Knowing that only two sources of the vital vitamin D exist, how truly we may say that a poor fish is elevated to a position where it alone vies with the sun in the service that both render mankind. It is in this service that hundreds of thousands of men are fishing the seas for better babies. With the promise of a sturdier race through ample access to the essential vitamin D, we may well sing along with Sir Walter Scott, "It's no' fish ye're buying; it's men's lives."

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woollen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

FORMER HEAD INDIANA KU KLUX KLAN

Serving Life Term For Murder of Girl—Prisoner Says He Is Ready To Tell Secrets of Politics in Hoosier State—Lawyer Says Others Are Not Faring Well in Prison—One Died Suddenly in Yard and Another Killed Self.

David C. Stephenson, former head of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, who is serving a life term in the state prison at Michigan City, for the murder two years ago of Madge Oberholtzer, is being held incommunicado at the prison following his statement that he is ready to talk about Indiana politics.

This situation is not different from the safeguards which have been thrown about Stephenson's tongue for many months, but it was anticipated that his challenge to the political power with whom he formerly hobbled might have stirred them to offer him the opportunity to say his say and have it over with.

Warden J. E. Daly refused admittance to all seeking to interview the prisoner. He explained that it was the prison rules.

Meanwhile Robert H. Moore, Stephenson's attorney, asserted that his client was ready and eager to talk. He said that William H. Reamy, Indianapolis prosecuting attorney, could learn all he needs to know about "political corruption" in Indiana by coming to the state prison and talking to Stephenson.

The determination of Stephenson to tell what he knows, Mr. Moore said, was inspired by the belief that the report which the board of charities will file at the prison next Friday upon its investigation of Stephenson's charges of cruelty, will turn out to be a whitewash. Moore said that also was his own expectation.

When the board of charities releases its report, the state prison board will take up the application of Stephenson for a 90-day parole in which to prepare his appeal from the murder conviction and take steps to conserve his fortune, which he says is being dissipated. On the same day an effort will be made before the Indiana supreme court to obtain a new trial for Stephenson on the technical ground that when he was granted a change of venue at the previous trial, the clerk of court failed to sign the certification.

Mr. Moore will go to Indianapolis

to argue the motion, in fact, indicated he sees nothing to be gained by remaining with his client while the state prison board considers his parole application. On the contrary, he said he is "sick" of the prison investigation and parole proceedings.

Regarding the report of the charities board, which has been forecast unofficially as finding no basis in Stephenson's cruelty charges, Mr. Moore said, "I could have done as well as the board of charities with a big tub of whitewash and a brush, saving the taxpayers the expense of the alleged investigation."

Assuming he was right in his prediction of the county board's report, he said the board was either ignorant of the facts, intimidated, or was deliberately covering up the situation. He said further investigation would show that others than his own client are not faring well in prison.

Mr. Moore charged that a man died suddenly in the prison yard of a stomach ailment several days ago and that another committed suicide. These he commended to the attention of the charities board also.

Policeman's Face Must Fit Helmet in London

London.—No matter what other qualifications a prospective London bobbie has, he must possess a "policeman's face" to get the job.

Provided he comes up to the educational standard required, passes a strict medical examination, and is possessed of a good physique, he still solemnly has to don a bobbie's helmet and parade before his superiors as a final test. If he does not wear the helmet becomingly the chances are he will have to look for a job elsewhere.

Police officials feel that it is most important that bobbies shall not look ridiculous, and maintain the type of helmet worn in London is not a head-dress that everyone can wear and retain his dignity.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Zanesville —When they stepped into water beyond their depth while wading three local girls were drowned here last night in the Muskingum river. They were Gertrude Harbin, 15; Louise Haines, 16 and Leola Conkle, 14, all of Oak avenue, Putnam, a suburb. The girls were among hundreds of others who sought relief from yesterday's heat at Muskingum river beach north of the city.

Hamilton —Coroner Edward Cook asked Mrs. McCormick of Monnette, Missouri today regarding disposition of the body of a man believed to be her son, Carl, 28, killed yesterday at West Chester. Letters indicated Dr. Cook said the man committed suicide by placing his head so that a Big Four train would sever his neck.

Hamilton — First Fourth of July casualty here reports today revealed was Nick Stathis, 33, window washer. He is in the hospital recovering from a bullet wound in the chest. He denied a police theory that he attempted suicide and explained he was preparing a pistol for the Fourth celebration and said he "didn't know it was loaded."

Dayton—Former Deputy U. S. Marshal M. Pratt, will resume his duties at the local office tomorrow, according to Stanley Borthwick, U. S. marshal for this district. In addition to Pratt the district marshal also announced the appointment of Monte Spillman, of Troy, former Miami county sheriff, as deputy marshal to succeed Joel Wagner, let out some time ago because of insufficient funds.

Youngstown —Preliminary hearing of 15 alleged narcotic law violators arrested in wholesale raids this week will begin Friday, United States Commissioner Max Brunswick announced today. Bonds totaling $83,500 were set after the alleged peddlers were arraigned. The leader of the "drug ring," Dr. J. T. Scott, plead not guilty asked a preliminary hearing and was held on $10,000 bond. He was caught after a chase thru Warren streets by deputy sheriffs.

Edna McCoy, the only one to plead guilty was bound over to the federal grand jury on $5,000 bond. All others plead not guilty and bond ranged from $2,500 to $7,500.

BARGAIN DAY IN BASEBALL MASON'S PARK

Newark Team Will Appear For a Double Header With the Eagles Sunday.

Circleville baseball fans will be given a bargain day on Sunday when the fast and hard hitting Newark team will appear at Mason's field for a double header with the Eagle team.

After the game played at Reynolds burg two weeks ago the management of the Eagle team gave the aggregation a shaking up and several new faces will be seen in the line-up Sunday.

Among other changes which the fans will welcome was the signing of Catcher Targer, of Chillicothe, who will be in the receiving end of the battery Sunday. Targer needs no introduction to Circleville fans. He is not only a fine catcher and a good hitter, but is a genuine player and should put some pep in the local organization.

George Kanavel will pitch the first game and the other pitcher in promised to be equally good.

On account of the double bill the first game will be called at one o'clock so the fans will not be compelled to invent excuses for being late for supper.

The teams are all enthused and pep ped up and are promising to give the fans a sure enough treat Sunday by winning both games of the double header.

As this is the first at home game for a month and a bargain day double header, a large crowd is expected, one in fact which will tax the capacity of the ample field.

Be among those who witness the rejuvenated birds start on their trip after our friends from Washington who are now setting in first place.

It had been estimated that the traffic for the year would not exceed 6,000,000 machines.

Safe for Goldfish

Washington.—Travel is going to be made safe for goldfish if the government can do it.

Acting on complaints by fish breeders about the heavy mortality rate of their charges while proceeding in cans via express toward private bowls, the bureau of fisheries has undertaken a serious scientific investigation. It already has some results to announce.

Lack of air in the water, at first suspected of causing the high death rate, doesn't seem to be important. The goldfish is hardy, and when his water isn't changed he swims up to the top and takes a breath of straight air from time to time. But the dirt that gets into the water seems to present a serious danger, and the scientists are working to determine just how much he can stand. When it finishes it hopes to be able to lay out travel schedules which will enable the breeders to deliver more of their finny ornaments alive.

NATIONAL TRACK AND FIELD MEET

Lincoln, Neb., June 29.--(UP.)—Vanguard of the nation's track and field stars, who will compete in the National A. A. U. track and field meet here July 1, 2 and 3, are expected to start arriving tomorrow.

Hundreds of athletes, representing athletic clubs and colleges from every section of the country, have been entered in this year's meet—a meet that is considered one of the chief tests for Olympic eligibility.

Considerable attention this year is being given to the athletic club entries. Main attention will be given the Olympic Club of Los Angeles, the Los Angeles A. C., the Hollywood A. C. and the Illinois Athletic Club.

Athletes on these squads will represent the best of the collegians for the past few years from the West Coast and from the middlewest. The Chicago A. A. will be entered but owing to the club's poor showing in the central division A. A. U. meet in Chicago it is not considered a likely team winner.

John Abernethy, of this city, will be a contestant in the St. Xavier College team.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

Of Mrs. Curtis Scott Unsolved by Family and Police.

Local police, the family and intimate friends of Mrs. Curtis Scott who disappeared from her home in East Franklin street June 15, are at a loss to explain her whereabouts. On that date Mrs. Scott left a note at her home saying that she had gone up town and one person is reported to have seen her going in that direction about 10 o'clock in the morning. There was nothing unusual in her attitude prior to her disappearance and she had never mentioned leaving home. Several meager clues, such as the disappearance of a revolver, gold pencil and glasses are being worked on but it is thought that she took none of the rest of her belongings.

Mrs. Scott was not in the best of health.

Police have notified the surrounding community of her disappearance and any information will be appreciated.

She was the wife of Curtis Scott, an employee of The Scioto Valley Traction Company. Two daughters, Misses Louise and Geneva, are at home.

Grain Combines Reducing Costs

Harvesting costs are reduced so materially by the use of the combined harvester-thresher, that this machine is rapidly replacing other harvesting machinery in the Great plains east of the Rocky mountains, according to a study just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Montana agricultural colleges. The advantages of this machine are in the lower cost of cutting and threshing grain, reduction in labor requirements and in shortening the harvesting and threshing periods.

East of the Rocky mountains a type of combine is in use which is considerably smaller than the kind formerly seen in California and in the Northwest states. Most of the new machines have a 15 or 16-foot cut, having auxiliary engines, and are drawn by tractors.

Reduces Amount of Labor.

Eight-foot combines harvested 275 acres of grain on the average, and 16-foot machines averaged 682 acres last season. Except where the grain was very heavy, the yield per acre had no appreciable effect on the rate of cutting. The minimum crew for a 15-foot or 16-foot combine is two men, not including grain haulers. Similar machines having a power drive from the tractor are sometimes operated by one man. It is estimated that the combine reduces the amount of labor necessary for harvesting and threshing in the Great plains from about 3.5 man hours per acre for cutting with the binder and threshing with a stationary machine to about 0.75 man hours per acre.

Operators of combines estimate the life of the machine to be about eight years. Their first cost ranges from about $1,000 for small machines to $2,500 for the larger sizes. Extended use of the machine during the harvesting season is essential to a low harvesting cost per acre. When the farmer has only a small acreage to cut, the investment and replacement charges of a combine may be too high.

To Make Combine Profitable.

In order to make the combine a profitable harvesting implement, the acreage to be cut must be greater than ordinarily cut with one binder. Harvesting with the combine, says the department, is not cheaper than with the binder and thresher unless 100 or more acres are available for cutting. There must be 150 or more acres available for cutting before costs with the combine fall below costs with a header and stationary thresher. This reckoning takes into account only the direct cash expenses ordinarily paid by the farmer, and the necessary replacement charges for the machines. The minimum acreage for more economical harvesting depends somewhat on the size of combine used.

Farmers in the Great plains allow grain to stand for five or seven days after it is ripe enough for binding before they begin harvesting with a combine. This unavoidable delay increases the risk from weather and shattering. Few farmers, however, consider the losses from shattering or bleaching to be serious in this area. Harvesting losses attributable to the machine itself are generally less with the combine than with other machines. Tests made show that properly adjusted combines separate grain as efficiently as many stationary threshers. Losses due to heads left on the ground in fields on which observations were made averaged 2.6 per cent of the total yield for the combine, 3.3 per cent for the header, and 6.1 per cent for the binder. A condensed report of the survey is contained in a preliminary report which may be obtained upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Agricultural Notes

The best milk is that which is kept clean, cool, and covered.

To keep the loafer hens from eating up the profits, why not eat up the loafer hens?

Speaking of efficiency on the farm, consider the sheep as a triple-product machine—wool, lamb, soil fertility.

The farmer who grows his food and feed at home doesn't need to gamble quite so much on a questionable cash crop.

The value of the vegetables produced on 1-20th of an acre, which is the size of a small family garden, is about $50, according to a Cornell bulletin on gardening.

Buck lambs are now penalized so drastically on all the larger markets that one cannot afford to raise them, while tails on sheep went out of fashion when wet pastures came in.

Lesson for July 3
SAUL CHOSEN KING

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 10:17-25; 11:12-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?
PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Becomes a King.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul, the First King of Israel.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Opportunities for Leadership.

The period of Judges ended with Samuel's administration. This lesson shows us the transition from the rule by the judges to the monarchy. For a comprehensive view of the transition it will be well to make a survey of chapters eight to eleven.

I. The People Demand a King (8:1-9).

1. Their reasons for this demand.
(1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age; (2) the unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors. In this Samuel committed a great blunder, for the office of judge was not hereditary. (3) The desire to be like other nations. The surrounding nations had a king as their leader. They wanted a king who would go out and fight their battles (v. 20).
2. Samuel's behavior under this trial (vv. 6-9). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Even though Samuel's blunders in part brought on this trouble he did the wise thing in taking it to the Lord in prayer. The Lord comforted him by assuring him that this rejection was not merely his rejection, but the rejection of the kingdom of God.

II. Samuel Tells of the Manner of the Kings (vv. 10-18).

He shows them that the king will be very exacting and arbitrary in his dealing with them.

1. He will take their sons and make them to serve in the army and do all kinds of hard work on his farm and in his house. He will make slaves of their daughters also.

2. He will take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers, and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that he will take the tenth part of the produce that remains and give to them.

III. Samuel's Protest Disregarded by the People (vv. 19-22).

IV. The King Providentially Pointed Out (9:1-10:16).

Saul was sent by his father to search for the asses that had wandered away. This was quite natural. While Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, at the same time God's sovereign purpose was being carried out. Although difficult to understand, God carries forth His sovereign purpose without interfering with man's freedom.

V. The King Chosen at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

The Lord had already pointed out to Samuel who should be king and Saul had been anointed. Let us observe:

1. Why Saul was chosen. If they would have a king the Lord would give them the one best suited to fill the place. He was from Benjamin, a small tribe, which would prevent undue rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, the leading tribes of Israel. He was also chosen because of his personal fitness (v. 23).

2. How Saul was chosen. The method was by lot. Samuel called them together before the Lord, and before the lot was cast he again remonstrated with them against such action. He showed them the base ingratitude of their rejection of such a God and King who had done so much for them, and gave them a chance to forego their rash demand.

3. How the king was received by the people. Saul knew that the Lord had chosen him, but through modesty and fear he shrank from the responsibility. When he was brought forth Samuel presented him to the people, assuring them that Saul was the Lord's choice.

VI. The King Confirmed at Gilgal (ch. 11).

Soon after the election at Mizpeh the Ammonites made a desperate demand upon the men of Jabesh-Gilead. Saul hearing of it hastily summoned the tribes together for war and won a remarkable victory. As he thus proved his ability the people wished to punish the sons of Belial, but Saul forbade them. Samuel took advantage of this auspicious situation and called all the people together at Gilgal where they formally crowned him their king.

The Life

To apprehend the life that is to be we must learn to think more largely and sacrificially of the life that is now. We must enlarge the scope and measure of today, must identify today with what we call eternity.—Charles Cuthbert Hall.

To move forward in life, you do not need to be forward in conduct, but you must keep your face to the front, and see your objective.—The Gideon

NO BAN ON CORN

Washington, June 29.—(UP.)—The steady and triumphant procession of Ohio roasting ears to the Detroit market will not be interrupted.

This is the gist of a decision by the United States department of agriculture. About the time the roasting ear season opened certain enterprising Michiganders became seized with a great fear of the corn borer and they petitioned the United States department of agriculture to tighten the restrictions so that green corn could not move from Ohio into Michigan.

The department officials considered the matter at a conference here, and their conclusion has just been announced, as follows:

"At a conference held at the department of agriculture to consider the necessity of placing restrictions on the movement of green corn within the area now quarantined on account of the European corn borer, it was decided that no such action is warranted at the present time.

"The conference was called and presided over by Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal board. Opportunity was given for those present to state their views on the subject and letters and telegrams from interested persons not present, were read and discussed. After a thorough consideration of the various points of view it was deemed unnecessary at the present time to place any restriction on the movement of green corn within the quarantined area."

C. OF C. OFFICERS

Nominated For Coming Year At Meeting Last Night.

Tuesday evening the Chamber of Commerce nominating committee announced the following nominations for officers for the coming year before the Chamber in its weekly meeting: For President, Frank A. Lynch, W. G. Hamilton and George M. Fitzpatrick; Vice President, Joseph R. Noecker, Walker Baughman and Robert Wiley; Treasurer, Fred R. Nicholas, Clark Will and Christian Schwarz; Directors, S. G. Rader, T. F. Jeffries, I. F. Snyder, G. I. Nickerson, T. O. Gilliland, Walter Marion, E. Sensenbrenner, K. J. Herrmann, Arthur Moore, H. W. Plum, E. W. Lutz, F. E. Barnhill, H. G. Stevenson, E. S. Neuding; Scout, R. L. Brehmer.

One President, Vice President, Treasurer and four Directors are to be chosen by the Chamber at its next meeting on Tuesday, July 5.

At the same meeting complete reports of the year's accomplishments, financial standing, etc., of the President, Secretary and Treasurer will be read and will appear later in The Herald. These reports will no doubt prove surprising to Chamber of Commerce "knockers" who are not aware of the good done by the institution in Circleville and the surrounding community.

SUES FOR RE-

MOVING FLOYD COLLINS' BODY

Brownsville, Ky., June 28.—Harry B. Thomas, Horse Cave dentist, was indicted by the Edmonson grand jury today on a charge of "mutilating the grave of Floyd Collins." Trial was set for the November term of court.

Dr. Thomas, who purchased Crystal Cave from the Collins family some months ago, is being sued for $50,000 damages for removing the casket from the grave to the interior of the cave, allegedly for exhibition purposes. The Collins brothers also have asked for an injunction to restrain the dentist from exhibiting the casket.

OF LIVESTOCK

The Leaders are in Chicago
Where Problems are to be Very Freely Discussed.

A number of leaders of Ohio's cooperative livestock marketing organizations are in Chicago this week attending the sessions of the American Institute of Cooperation, according to word received from the officers of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation. Study
livestock cooperation is being emphasized this week; the second of the four weeks of the institute sessions.

Prominent on this week's program,
according to the announcement are
L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio
Wool Growers' Cooperative association, E. C. Rector, director of the Ohio Livestock Cooperative association, M. L. Howell, manager of the Ohio Poultry Producers' Cooperative
association and George Henning of Ohio State university's college of agriculture.

Mr. Henning and Mr. Rector are scheduled to tell some of the experiences and problems in livestock marketing in Ohio. During the week
Ohio experience will be compared to that of more than 30 other states.
Mr. Howell will tell of the work being done in cooperative poultry marketing in this state.

Mr. Palmer is to lead a discussion on problems of wool marketing. On Saturday he will meet a group of
wool marketing leaders from all parts of the country to consider the combination of state and local wool
cooperatives into five to seven district
pools. Should this plan, which has been discussed for some time among
wool growers, go into effect, the Ohio warehouse at Columbus would
be made the headquarters for grading and storage of wools in this section.

CLEVE RADER
HEADS BUCK-EYE
TRAPSHOOTERS

Will Enter Team at Grand
American Tournament
at Vandalia.

J. C. Rader, of this city, heads the list in the Buck-Eye Traps shooters association with a record of 1073 broke out of 1100, or an average of .9754.

This is the greatest year in the history of the state, and fifteen marksmen average 95% or better.
Texas comes next with seven. Rader visited the Ohio State shoot and broke 150 straight in the A class race
to the tie-up with Charlie Young, the Springfield star. Charlie Bogert, Sandusky, takes second honors to date. Bogert has shot at 3500 clays,
been fortunate in hearing the cry or
"dead" 3410 times which gives him
a mark of .9742. Charlie Young, the 1926 Grand American winner, is holding down third place with 97 flat on 3970 clays. George Statler, the brilliant Piqua gunner, closely follows
Young with .9651. John Taylor, Newark, tops the professional gunners of
the state with the great average of
.9752. The Buck-Eye state will enter
a strong team at the Grand American tournament which will be held at Vandalia the last week in August.

The quintette will be composed of
S. D. Geddes, Harrisburg, the 1927
Ohio State champion, Charles Young
Springfield, Henry Shick, Huntsville,
Charlie Bogert, Sandusky and C. R.
Swartz, Kenton, Ohio, have a great
chance to cop the Grand American State team honors this year. Last year the premier "five" that repre-

Leap-Year Reckoning

Quite Simple Matter

The year 1928 is a leap year, as it
is divisible by four without remainder.
There has been no change in the calendar for the last two centuries. As
the exact length of a year, determined
by the earth's revolution around the sun, is a little less than 365 1/4
days, the old Julian calendar, giving a leap year every four years,
was inexact. A new calendar, called the Georgian, was proposed and adopted by most Christian nations in the sixteenth century or later, to rectify this error. This calendar provides for 97 leap years in each 400
years. The only difference from the Julian calendar is that century years,
such as 1600, 1700, 1800, 1900, etc.,
are not leap years unless they are
divisible by 400 without remainder.
Thus 1600 and 2000 are leap years, while 1700, 1800 and 1900 are not
leap years.

Mysterious Rays Reach Us

Wonderful discoveries are not unlikely from present study of the Millikan "cosmic rays," which are now known to bombard the earth from space and which can penetrate nine feet of lead. Science suggests the possibility that man may be able to harness this "free energy" as one solution of the world's work problem.—

BOATING ON OHIO CANALS

Old Vessel May be Raised
and Sailed to the Scene of
Its Former Glory.

Fourteen years ago when the centennial of Perry's victory on Lake Erie was about to be celebrated, investigation proved that the commodore's old flag ship used on that historic occasion, was lying at the bottom of the bay at Erie, Pennsylvania
where it sank soon after the notable battle—in recoverable condition, and
the hull was raised, reconstructed,
rigged and sailed to the scene of its former glory to be a feature of the centennial occasion.

And now that the centennial of an important peace-time event is to be celebrated, the sailing of the first
canal boat on Ohio's system of canals, it is proposed to recover the canal boat that had this honor. It was on July 3, 1827, that "The Ohio"
a canal boat bearing freight and passengers started from Akron on the newly completed first section of the Ohio & Erie canal, for Cleveland and
reached Cleveland the following day.

Forty-four locks had to be negotiated and at every considerable port enroute, brief stops were made to receive popular ovations, the booming
of cannon, speeches by officials and the cheering of the people. All who took part in that notable event or
saw it, are of course gone, and the system of transportation then installed has been almost completely superseded by other and better systems but it served its day and generation well.

The hull of the old Ohio has been found in the mud of a basin in Coven-try township, Summit county, where it was towed and sunk when no longer serviceable, and an attempt is to be made to float and restore it temporarily at least, to a navigable condition, for use in the centennial celebration.

A few years ago a portion of the stern of an old canal boat could be seen projecting above the mud in an abandoned and partly filled-up section of the canal near the foot of Mound street, Columbus. It may have been a contemporary craft with "The Ohio"
and its framework might be recovered and reconditioned should occasion require.—J. H. Galbraith.

BIBLE ANTEDATED
BY MANUSCRIPTS

Older Than Papyrus Found in Tomb of St. Cuthbert.

Washington.—Biblical manuscripts
older even than the celebrated Stony-hurst gospel according to St. John,
said to have been found in the tomb
of St. Cuthbert, who died in 687, are on exhibition in the United States.

One of the collections, bequeathed
to the nation by Charles L. Freer of Detroit, is in the Freer Gallery of Art here. The other, comprising a few papyrus fragments, is at the University of Michigan.

The "Washington Manuscripts," as
the Freer collection is known, include one of the oldest Greek versions of the Bible known. Its date
is placed in the Fourth century by
Dr. E. A. Lowe, Oxford lecturer and
Institutions.

Considerable attention has been drawn to the "Washington Manuscripts," Doctor Lowe pointed out, because they carry the following extra
verses after Mark 16:14:

"But they defended themselves,
saying that this age of lawlessness
and unbelief is under the power of Satan, who does not permit those made inure by evil spirits to comprehend the truth and power of God.
Therefore reveal now thy righteousness, they said to Christ. And Christ replied to them that the limit of the years of the power of Satan has been made full, but other dread events
are near at hand, and in behalf of those who had sinned I was delivered unto death in order that they may return to the truth and no longer sin, to the end that they may inherit the spiritual and imperishable
heaven."

In addition to the Greek parchment manuscript, of the gospels,
Psalms, Deuteronomy, Joshua and fragments of the epistles of Paul,
the collection includes a few pages
of ancient papyrus bearing parts of the minor prophets. All were found in Egypt. Freer acquired them
through a dealer.

Worthy of Monument

Speaking of mute, inglorious Miltons—A machine is said to have been devised to take the noise out of steel riveting and the inventor's name is not given.

HAPPY THOUGHTS

Confidence is safe nowhere.

Custom becomes second nature.

Vanity is often the unseen spur.

It is wisdom to laugh often.—

satisfactory.Every woman believes in platonic love until she tries it.It is in great dangers that we see great courage.—Regnard.Anticipated pleasures frequently quires judgment to direct it.Death has so many doors to let out life.—Beaumont and Fletcher.No man can hope to be happily married unless he is a good listener.A man must either imitate the vicious or hate them.—Montaigne.One can generally do without the "support" of an extremely unpopular man.Inconsistency is the only thing in which men are consistent.—Horatio Smith.There is just as much room for domestic jars in a flat as there is in a palace.'Tis not what man does which exalts him, but what man would do.—Robert Browning.No well-informed person has declared a change of opinion to be in-natural that there is no record that anybody ever laughed.Too great refinement is false delicacy, and true delicacy is solid refinement.—La Rochefoucauld.

Embarrassing Answer

Mr. and Mrs. will be sufficient identification of two Irvington parents
who have a great amount of pride in their bright-eyed little daughter.

Recently they took the little girl
with them on a visit to Gas City,
where they formerly lived.

While there she was the center of attraction.

"Where is mamma's girl?" she
was asked.

Quickly she responded by patting
herself on the head.

"Whose girl are you?" was another question.

"Mamma's," was the answer.

"Well, where is daddy's girl?" came another question.

"Down at his office," she replied.

French Thrift

One of the outstanding characteristics of French thrift is the degree
to which holdings of bonds and stocks are disseminated throughout
the various elements of the population. A recent report of the Federation of holders of securities shows
that state securities are held by
1,320,000 persons and railroad securities by 950,000. These figures seem
the more extraordinary when it is recalled that in France there are less than 12,000,000 families.

Curious Bird

More than 300 different kinds of birds were brought from South America by Ludlow Griscom of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. One of the most curious
in the collection is the motmot. "This bird," says Griscom, "bites its own tail. It is green and so closely resembles the color of the leaves that one can only see it by looking for the side-to-side movement of its tail,
which resembles a pendulum in regularity."

Sea Elephants Going Fast

Sea elephants, which at one time
abounded in large numbers off the coast of California and Lower California, were in 1912 estimated as numbering only 150 on the island of Gaudalupe. A recent expedition from San Diego to the same island found the herd to consist of 450. The government of Mexico is doing its utmost
to preserve this species.

Line Wrecked by Tree

Electric power lines are subject to all sorts of attacks. This spring a large tree, frozen upright in moving ice on the Merrimac river, raked down
three cross-river cables near Suncock,
N. H. Electricity for the nearby towas was routed over another line temporarily so that service was not interrupted.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period
in France beginning about March,
1793, when the revolutionary tribunal
was appointed, and ending in July,
1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates. During this time a great number of persons, principally of the aristocracy, were executed.

Synthetic Sleep

The Germans have invented a sleep-
machine which nerve specialists commend to insomnia victims. It is a small box that emits a humming
sound like a hive of bees. It is timed to hum for 40 minutes and then to fade out, figuratively speaking. The principle of it is the same as that
of mother's rocking chair with its wordless songs.—Los Angeles Times.

THURSDAY,

WOMAN'S ACT THAT SAVED KING'S LIFE

History refers to the unfortunate inauguration of masquerades at the court of Charles VI as the "Burning Ballet." This famous dance was held January 29, 1393, in connection with a festival in the royal palace at Paris. The desire of a certain gentleman to create a sensation by having a dance of wild men to please the women resulted in the selection of King Charles and four of his nobles to participate in the revel.

They had themselves sewn up in tight-fitting linen suits covered with resin, on which a quantity of tow was glued. In this guise they performed their weird dance. The duke of Orleans, in attempting to discover their identity, approached too near one of them with a lighted taper. The tow caught fire and the flames quickly enveloped the luckless performers. The king was saved from death by the presence of mind of one of the women, who enveloped him in the lengthy train attached to her gown. The shock, however, proved too great, and he never fully recovered.—Kansas City Star.

How they hated him, and yet no public figure, save Washington, was so adored. Men were either Alexander Hamilton's frenzied enemies or else his unshaking followers. His flaming personality left no middle ground. From the day that he came to America from the West Indies, sent by charitable subscriptions to receive an education, genius set him apart from his fellows.

A boy of twenty, serving a gun, even the reserved Washington was won to him at once, and made him his military secretary; generals received his counsel eagerly, and congress covered before the lash of his tongue and pen.

Born out of wedlock, he moved as royally as a prince of the blood; fashioned with the exquisiteness of a Greek carving, his face was only saved from beauty by its strength; and that proud heiress, Betty Schuyler, had given him her hand in gladness.—From "Sons of the Eagle," by George Creel.

First Adhesive Stamps

The adhesive postage stamp was invented May 6, 1840, by James Chalmers, bookseller, of Dundee, Scotland, according to an answered question in Liberty. It was not adopted in America until 1847.

"Collette," Their Mascot

(Copyright.)

HAD Paula been a tiny black Persian kitten like the one in the basket beside her, she would have purred, too. She was so happy to have finally succeeded in buying the pet she was now taking home on the Long Island train with her that she could actually have purred with joy. For many weeks she had been looking for a small black kitten and only that day while out at lunch had come across this adorable one.

Having nothing whatever in the office that she and her brother occupied with which to make the kitten's basket soft and warm, Paula had been obliged to use one of the office supply towels.

She had already named the kitten after the small patented article for which she and her brother had acquired the agency, which was already bringing them a decent living. Little "Collette" was to be their mascot.

Paula peeped into the cozy basket and as she did so a small girl sat down in the seat beside her. The man who had found the seat for the child found one for himself in front.

There was no slightest doubt that the small girl was feeling very fearful about something. Paula heard an occasional trembling breath as if she were making a brave effort to stifle her emotions.

Paula's first thought was to make an effort to amuse the little girl, and she very cautiously opened the lid of "Collette's" basket. The kitten was curled up into a perfect puff ball of silky black fur.

"Oh!" cried the little girl with startling interest, "a little kitty!" She snuggled against Paula and leaned her head down so that she could almost rub her cheek against the kitten. "My daddy promised me one for my birthday and we have tried all day to get one and couldn't—get—a—single kitten." With that the tears burst forth.

"What would your daddy say to me if I gave you this one?" questioned Paula. "I should love to make you a present of it but you must name it 'Collette.' Do you think—"

"Oh-h!" gasped the delighted child. "I would just love—"

The man in front turned and entered into this strange conversation.

"My dear Tots—you mustn't let the lady give you her own kitten."

"I should love to give the kitten to your little girl. I can easily get another tomorrow, as he is one of a big litter. Please let her have it—children's disappointments are so very real to them."

The train was pulling in at Forest Hills station and Paula pressed the basket with "Collette" in it into the happy child's arms. "Be sure you name her 'Collette,'" she said swiftly, and only the searching eyes of the all-wise kitten saw the look in Paula's own eyes as she bade swift farewell to her pet.

Paula felt forlorn as she walked home from the station with the two pink china bowls she had bought for "Collette's" milk and boiled fish. She recalled the very happy light in the child's eyes when she accepted the kitten and that cheered her a bit.

And if Tots Blaine was treasuring her kitten tremendously, so also was John Blaine treasuring it because it was the golden thread whereby his heart had been tugged into heretofore unknown regions.

And John Blaine's only hope for the future was that he might again see the girl on the train so that he could easily and without any offense thank her again.

But "Collette," in her cozy basket, had other plans for the bringing together of a couple in a more speedy manner.

Of course "Collette" knew that John Blaine was not the father of Tots, nor in any way, shape or form tied up matrimonially. He was just Tots' best uncle. So plans proceeded when "Collette" almost refused to come out of her cozy basket after arriving at her new home and being made much of by an animal-loving family. She went back and forth in her basket, went round and round in cat fashion on that office towel which Paula had used for a cushion for her, and it was not until John Blaine himself seemed to grasp the idea that she seemed pleased and purred loudly.

Blaine took the towel into his own possession and first thing in the morning trailed to the office whose name was written in red letters thereon. He mustn't lose any time in returning it—not in the least that he cared about the towel-supply people—but he did not want to miss a moment more of life without knowing Paula.

She was sitting beside a great desk occupied by a man whom Blaine instantly disliked, then as quickly admired when he found it was her brother.

"I had to return this towel," said Blaine. "I didn't want you to get in trouble for losing it," and he grinned openly.

GOOD MORALS REQUIRED IN SALESMANSHIP

Does Not Involve Series of Tricks and Snares to Induce People to Buy.

Likening the morals pertaining to salesmanship to the twelfth verse in the seventh chapter of Matthew, Harvey R. Young, advertising director of The Dispatch, addressed members attending the International Advertising association convention at Denver, Colorado, Sunday evening from the pulpit of Cameron Methodist church on the subject of "Morals of Salesmanship."

"There are several definitions for the words 'morals' and 'ethics,' but so far as morals pertaining to salesmanship are concerned, the Biblical verse, 'Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them for this is law' and the prophet offers a plain and simpler definition than those found in dictionaries," Young declared.

Salesmanship and advertising are closely linked together. Successful selling as well as advertising must be built on confidence. When confidence is destroyed business will suffer," he continued, pointing out that two classes of salesmen, the class which disparages a competitive salesman and the class which makes sales thru misrepresentation, destroys confidence.

"The greatest sales manager the world has ever known was our Savior Jesus Christ, who more than 2000 years ago was the forerunner of truth and with his staff of salesmen, the twelve apostles, laid the foundation, for the moral upbuilding of the world, which will go on forever."

"Good salesmanship no longer involves a series of tricks and snares to induce people to buy."

Many of the failures of sales people of today is due to the fact that they neither develop their possibilities nor have any future object in view, according to Mr. Young, who further declared that a salesman to be successful must possess an inflexible purpose.

MOONSHINE IS CAPTURED ON EAST MAIN

Out in front stood a brand new Essex car and in this was a case of sixteen pints of the same stuff packed securely in a pasteboard container. A lap robe was thrown over the case to hide it from view. The whisky and car were confiscated by the police and was taken to the city hall.

Evans was placed under arrest and appeared in court this morning pleading guilty to possession of intoxicating liquor and was given a fine of $300 and costs amounting to $311.20 which he paid and was discharged. Evans was represented by M. C. Seyfert Jr. The Essex machine which was in Mr. Evans' possession was not confiscated as the American Finance company claims ownership.

AMUSEMENTS

Director Frank Lloyd has made another remarkable picture for Paramount with the inspired Esther Ralston, Gary Cooper, Einar Hanson and Norman Trevor.

"Children of Divorce," now playing at the Met theater, tears a new slash in the veil covering the evils of modern divorce and pictures in bold colors life in the youthful ranks of the wealthy social class.

The cast headed by Clara Bow and Esther Ralston, both of whom are starred, and Einar Hanson and handsome young Gary Cooper, give wonderfully fine consistent performances.

Too much cannot be said in praise of "Miss Bow as the girl who forces marriage on the man of her choice (Cooper) in spite of his love for Esther Ralston. Miss Ralston, in Esther Ralston, in turn, as lovely, dignified Jean Waddington, suffers her disappointment contagiously as she found ready sympathy flowing from the audience that saw the picture on the opening night here.

Miss Bow, Miss Ralston and Mr. Cooper in their big scene where Jean learns that Kitty and Ted have been married during a night of revelry, rise to the historic heights as actresses and actor. Theirs were parts that might well have been given more experienced players, but their youth stood them in good stead and even added to the appeal of the characterizations.

Taken all in all, "Children of Divorce" couldn't possibly have been better than a good picture. Owen Johnson wrote the story. Remember his "Stover at Yale" and "The Enemy Sex?" Frank Lloyd translated it to the screen. The four leading players and a fine supporting cast carry it thru and when one has Norman Trevor, Hedda Hopper, Edward Martindel and Julia Swayne Gordon in support, you have nothing less than the best that's to be obtained!

Country Without Trees

Iceland is assigned to the Western hemisphere. It is a large, volcanic and treeless island in the North Atlantic ocean. Its most northern point is 66 degrees 33 minutes north latitude. Its estimated area is 40,497 square miles, so that Iceland is somewhat larger than Ireland. The population numbers 95,000. The capital of Iceland is Reykjavik, containing a population of about 20,000.

Mythology's Meaning

Mythology may be described as a collection of fables and traditions referring to the forces of nature, to national heroes and to the pagan gods. The nature-myths are primitive attempts to explain the processes of nature, and may be looked upon as the beginning of natural science. The heromyths are akin to sacred mythology.

At eighty-six years of age, Mrs. Sarah Patek of San Francisco, Calif., is the star in a one-reel moving picture. Relatives in England wanted to see her, but she was unable to visit them, so she arranged to have a moving picture taken of her in her home, to be sent to England. Supporting the star were her four surviving children, ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

CODFISH LIVERS
RIVAL SUN RAYS

Scientists Point Benefits to Es Derived From Use
of Sea Food.

Philadelphia.—Shades of Apollo and Izak Walton! Here is science claiming that the only rival of the sun is found in "a poor fish."

We know that Sir Walter Scott sang once to the effect that "It's no' fish ye're buying—it's men's lives." We remember also the lines of an old Scotch song, a fishmonger's call in which a similar prophetic note was sounded. "Wha'll buy my eulder herin'?" the cry runs. "Ye little ken their worth."

"O, you may call them vulgar farlin'; Wives and mithers maist desparin' Ca' them lives of men."

One hundred years after these words rang out in the chill, foggy air of Scottish markets, scientists step from their laboratories long enough to tell us that, next to the sun, "desparin' wives and mithers" must depend upon a fish to maintain the stalwart limbs and stout backbone of the nation's youth.

In these few remaining regions of the earth where clothes are incidental, if not negligible, where the sun is given its chance to feed the bodies of men, we find, as a rule, that the natives of such Edens are straight as an arrow, well formed, strong, and happy. It is when we reach civilization that we encounter frequent deformities, bowed legs, gawky knees, bulging wrists and ankles.

Clothes Rob Man of Sun.

The fact that we free to the sun only the few square inches of our face and the backs of ungloved hands is a primary factor in the general tendency in this and other civilized countries toward rachitic conditions. The average infant is too much over-clothed when lying in the sun to derive its full benefits. Sun porches are light, cheery, and warm; but unless their glass is of a special type none of the helpful ultra-violet rays of the sun make their way inside.

Without sufficient sunlight or without sufficient supply in another form of the factor that is conveyed by the sun's rays, our children develop rickets, that starvation of bone structures that leaves them soft and flexible, producing various forms of deformity, including soft teeth, misshapen skulls, jaws and skeletal structures, and even constricted chests.

The elements that give proper strength to bones and teeth are calcium and phosphorus. These two elements cannot be utilized in bone growth, however, unless a third factor is present, just as a pile of coal is useless without ignition to convert it into heat.

Like Bones Made of Rubber.

This factor is vitamin D. Without this vitamin, calcium phosphate cannot be deposited sufficiently in the bony structures of the body. Although bones keep right on growing, the unfortunate child to whom they belong might as well have a rubber skeleton if the vitamin deficiency is not corrected.

The action of the ultra-violet rays of the sun upon one of the fatty components of our skin produces vitamin D or its physiological equivalent, according to researches conducted by Hulschinsky, Hess, Shipley, and other scientists.

Sunlight, then, is the natural protection against rickets.

But civilized man does not lead a natural life. Our mode of dressing and dwelling does not permit natural living. And it is not likely that we shall emulate the Polynesian soon by discarding our clothing for bared existence under a beneficent sun.

When it is known how important vitamin D is to life and health, it seems an odd prank of nature that this factor is absent in practically all foods used for human consumption except the liver of codfish. Probably nature felt that she was taking ample care of us by giving us sunlight. Then she permitted man to discover for himself how prodigally she provides for his welfare by storing this valuable factor in one of his commonest sources of food.

Just how the cod manages to distinguish himself above all other animals of earth, sea and sky by monopolizing the storage of vitamin D is not clearly determined. One theory of scientists has it that the ultra-violet rays of the sun penetrate below the surface of the ocean and so irradiate the cod. This would presuppose that the cod's skin is especially sensitized to these rays as man's skin seems to be, just as if both cod and man were photographic negatives which, upon exposure to ultra-violet rays, produce a positive effect when developed in the chemistry of the body.

It is more likely, however, that the cod gets his sunlight by eating it. Study of the habits of the cod in Norwegian waters and in the waters off Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Maine have strengthened this theory. F. F. Berg of the Squibb laboratories watched the early spring surge of thousands of cod to the shallower, warmer waters near the Lofoten islands, where they came to spawn.

At this period of a cod's life he develops a ravenous appetite. And it is what nature provides to satisfy that hunger that offers another theory in explanation of the fact that cod liver oil is the most prolific source of vitamin D known to man.

Piscatorial Drama.

This piscatorial drama is very much like the "house that Jack built." Great shoals of herring are loosed by nature into the waters near Norway and our northeastern coast just as the cod feels these pangs of hunger. So here is the cod that gives us vitamins. Here are the squid that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us the vitamins. Here are the mosses and sea plants that are eaten by the squid that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us vitamins.

Day after day, week upon week, the sun pours its rays down upon these sea plants. The squid themselves do little more than float around near the surface of the sea, absorbing still more ultra-violet rays. From that point on it is obvious how, theoretically, the codfish acquires his vast store of vitamin D by literally eating sunshine.

It has been only a few years since the existence of vitamin D was recognized. In fact, its identification came about through experiments by Prof. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university with cod-liver oil. From that moment, the medical profession moved with reinforced courage against the threat of rickets. The late Dr. Emmet Holt, at the time of his death, was stressing the importance of dependence of sound health in adult life upon building bones, blood and muscles in childhood.

Would Reduce Teeth Ills.

It is claimed that, if the perfect condition of bone, blood and muscle in new-born children had been maintained in the last century through sufficient vitamin D supply, dental statistics would not show that 98 per cent of the people of the United States have imperfect teeth. There would have been less excuse for rheumatism and heart and kidney troubles, which are, in fact, after-effects of some local infection.

Authorities are urging that the growing generation of children be granted the heritage that is their right under the sun. Plenty of sunlight is advocated, but, at best, the sun alone under modern living conditions cannot assure sufficient vitamin D for a stoutheaded posterity.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, states in a recent article:

"One of the greatest discoveries of the last five years has been the establishing of the fact that cod-liver oil has specific properties in preventing the development of bone diseases of infancy and in aiding proper growth. Under the unforgotten encouragement of the medical profession, child welfare agencies have preached the doctrine of liberal administration of cod-liver oil in infancy." Doctor Fishbein's article also stated that the council on pharmacy and chemistry of the American Medical association agreed upon advising "routine administration of cod-liver oil to all growing infants provided the product had been standardized as to its actual potency."

Every Wharf Had Its Keg.

Long before we had knowledge of vitamins, cod-liver oil was used. Coast dwellers and seafaring folk drank it in quantities as a means for withstanding exposure to cold weather and as a tonic. Their method of extracting it was crude. Every wharf had its keg sitting in the sun, the barrel full of cod livers, the oil separating and rising to the top where it was skimmed off.

From a modest position as a by-product of the fishing industry, the securing of livers for their oil is assuming an important and valuable major position. It is estimated that the world's output of cod-liver oil in 1925 was approximately 2,500,000 gallons, or 94,000 barrels of 30 gallons each. When it is known that it takes about six tons of codfish to yield enough liver to produce one barrel of cod-liver oil, some idea can be gathered of the gain that thousands of fishing families experience as a result of the laboratory discovery of vitamin D.

More Vitamin A Than Milk.

While cod-liver oil is essential chiefly for its content of vitamin D, the fact that it is also a rich storehouse of vitamin A is by way of being a bonus that nature has thrown in for good measure. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance against pulmonary infections, colds, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and the like. It is as essential as vitamin D, and the complete absence of one or the other generally results fatally. Vitamin A, unlike vitamin D, is present in other foods, principally in butter from cows that have been fed on green food, in milk and cream, and in green vegetables such as spinach.

When it is known, however, that one pint of cod-liver oil is as rich in vitamin A as at least 1,200 pints of the best grade A milk, the greater concentration of the factor in oil becomes apparent.

Knowing that only two sources of the vital vitamin D exist, how truly we may say that a poor fish is elevated to a position where it alone vies with the sun in the service that both render mankind. It is in this service that hundreds of thousands of men are fishing the seas for better babies. With the promise of a sturdier race through ample access to the essential vitamin D, we may well sing along with Sir Walter Scott, "It's no' fish ye're buying; it's men's lives."

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woollen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

THRIFT MUST BE STABILIZED AND DEVELOPED

Don't Live or Save Beyond Your Means, is a Safe Rule.

There is little or no value in sporadic economy. To save for a while only to squander later when temptation proves too strong, is of no benefit whatever.

Those who have succeeded in developing habits of thrift have schooled themselves first of all to save systematically. A certain amount put aside each day, each week or each month will do wonders in stabilizing one's methods of life and stimulating personal progress.

Those who make resolves to begin saving money and then fail to live up to their resolutions are generally the victims of poor planning. They either try to save more than they should or they do not plan on saving a certain amount daily, weekly or monthly.

There are rightful and necessary demands made upon every individual. If we try to save too much, especially if we are beginners in thrift, we may fail.

The amount to be saved is a matter of adjustment. The man who has never saved money will find that he can save more the second year on the same income than he was able to save the first. This is because, with the development of thrift habits, he not only finds it easier to restrict his extravagances and unessentials, but he finds his efficiency increased. He develops short cuts. He learns that, with ingenuity, he can attain the same results often at less cost than when he was not under such self-discipline.

Goethe observed that "enthusiasm is of the greatest value when we are not carried away by it." This can be applied to saving money as well as to everything else in life.

Even in thrift there is harm in over-enthusiasm.

Plan your savings along lines commensurate with your income and the conditions of life about you.

BIG REUNION ORPHAN HOME THREE DAYS

The annual reunion of the alumni and students of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home at Xenia, will be held this year at the home on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 3, 4 and 5.

Unusual preparations for the entertainment of guests have been made. The exercises will be largely of a patriotic character but attention will be paid to the wonderful work the school has done and the high position in life many of the alumni have secured.

There is not a county in the state or a state in the Union where graduates of the school have not settled. A number have gone to foreign countries and attained places of prominence.

The attendance is to be the largest in the history of these reunions and from two to three hundred will be present. Some are making the trip from foreign lands to be present. One of two speakers of prominence are to be secured and addresses will be delivered every day by men and women of prominence.

E. W. Hughes, parliamentarian of the state legislature, a graduate of the Home has charge of the arrangements and is preparing the program.

"Pickling" in Paraffin Saves Museum Groups

New York.—"If you think we're waxworks," he said, "you ought to pay, you know. Waxworks weren't made to be looked at for nothing. Now!"

"Contrariwise," added the one marked, "Dee," "if you think we're alive, you ought to speak."

Alice's dilemma would no doubt have been considerably increased had she encountered beings who looked very real and almost alive, and yet were indubitably waxworks, in the literal sense of being completely sculptured in wax. This is exactly what two workers at the American Museum of Natural History have done.

G. K. Noble and M. E. Jaekle, confronted with the troublesome fact that frogs and toads and spotted salamanders and all manner of other interesting but nonfur-bearing creatures cannot be successfully stuffed and mounted by the ordinary methods of taxidermists, have solved the problem by literally pickling them in solid paraffin wax. They first remove all trace of water from the specimens by appropriate chemical means, arrange the little animals in natural positions and soak them for several days or weeks in melted paraffin, until every tissue is thoroughly impregnated and you cannot tell where the flesh ends and the paraffin begins.

By this method reptiles and amphibians can be worked into naturalistic museum groups and made as "alive" looking as birds and fur-bearing animals, instead of being pallid corpses pickled in jars of alcohol. They keep their natural colors indefinitely, except that sometimes their eyes need to be touched up with a little gold paint.

Red Hair Not So Good

In the hope of exterminating or lessening what they considered a curse, the Egyptians, in the time of the Ptolemies, used to burn a red-haired maiden once a year, so violently opposed were they to hair of a red hue, says the New York Herald-Tribune.

FORMER HEAD INDIANA KU KLUX KLAN

Serving Life Term For Murder of Girl—Prisoner Says He Is Ready To Tell Secrets of Politics in Hoosier State—Lawyer Says Others Are Not Faring Well in Prison—One Died Suddenly in Yard and Another Killed Self.

David C. Stephenson, former head of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, who is serving a life term in the state prison at Michigan City, for the murder two years ago of Madge Oberholtzer, is being held incommunicado at the prison following his statement that he is ready to talk about Indiana politics.

This situation is not different from the safeguards which have been thrown about Stephenson's tongue for many months, but it was anticipated that his challenge to the political power with whom he formerly hobnobbed might have stirred them to offer him the opportunity to say his say and have it over with.

Warden J. E. Daly refused admittance to all seeking to interview the prisoner. He explained that it was the prison rules.

Meanwhile Robert H. Moore, Stephenson's attorney, asserted that his client was ready and eager to talk. He said that William H. Reamy, Indianapolis prosecuting attorney, could learn all he needs to know about "political corruption" in Indiana by coming to the state prison and talking to Stephenson.

The determination of Stephenson to tell what he knows, Mr. Moore said, was inspired by the belief that the report which the board of charities will file at the prison next Friday upon its investigation of Stephenson's charges of cruelty, will turn out to be a whitewash. Moore said that also was his own expectation.

When the board of charities releases its report, the state prison board will take up the application of Stephenson for a 90-day parole in which to prepare his appeal from the murder conviction and take steps to conserve his fortune, which he says is being dissipated. On the same day an effort will be made before the Indiana supreme court to obtain a new trial for Stephenson on the technical ground that when he was granted a change of venue at the previous trial, the clerk of court failed to sign the certification.

Mr. Moore will go to Indianapolis

to argue the motion, in fact, indicated he sees nothing to be gained by remaining with his client while the state prison board considers his parole application. On the contrary he said he is "sick" of the prison investigation and parole proceedings.

Regarding the report of the charities board, which has been forecast unofficially as finding no basis in Stephenson's cruelty charges, Mr. Moore said, "I could have done as well as the board of charities with a big tub of whitewash and a brush, saving the taxpayers the expense of the alleged investigation."

Assuming he was right in his prediction of the county board's report, he said the board was either ignorant of the facts, intimidated, or was deliberately covering up the situation. He said further investigation would show that others than his own client are not faring well in prison.

Mr. Moore charged that a man died suddenly in the prison yard of a stomach ailment several days ago and that another committed suicide. These he commended to the attention of the charities board also.

Policeman's Face Must

Fit Helmet in London

London.—No matter what other qualifications a prospective London bobbie has, he must possess a "policeman's face" to get the job.

Provided he comes up to the educational standard required, passes a strict medical examination, and is possessed of a good physique, he still solemnly has to don a bobbie's helmet and parade before his superiors as a final test. If he does not wear the helmet becomingly the chances are he will have to look for a job elsewhere.

Police officials feel that it is most important that bobbies shall not look ridiculous, and maintain the type of helmet worn in London is not a head-dress that everyone can wear and retain his dignity.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Zanesville —When they stepped into water beyond their depth while wading three local girls were drowned here last night in the Muskingum river. They were Gertrude Harbin, 15; Louise Haines, 16 and Leola Conkle, 14, all of Oak avenue, Putnam, a suburb. The girls were among hundreds of others who sought relief from yesterday's heat at Muskingum river beach north of the city.

Hamilton —Coroner Edward Cook asked Mrs. McCormick of Monnette, Missouri today regarding disposition of the body of a man believed to be her son, Carl, 28, killed yesterday at West Chester. Letters indicated Dr. Cook said the man committed suicide by placing his head so that a Big Four train would sever his neck.

Hamilton —First Fourth of July casualty here reports today revealed was Nick Stathis, 33, window washer. He is in the hospital recovering from a bullet wound in the chest. He denied a police theory that he attempted suicide and explained he was preparing a pistol for the Fourth celebration and said he "didn't know it was loaded."

Dayton—Former Deputy U. S. Marshal M. Pratt, will resume his duties at the local office tomorrow, according to Stanley Borthwick, U. S. marshal for this district. In addition to Pratt the district marshal also announced the appointment of Monte Spillman, of Troy, former Miami county sheriff, as deputy marshal to succeed Joel Wagner, let out some time ago because of insufficient funds.

Youngstown —Preliminary hearing of 15 alleged narcotic law violators arrested in wholesale raids this week will begin Friday, United States Commissioner Max Brunswick announced today. Bonds totaling $83,500 were set after the alleged peddlers were arraigned. The leader of the "drug ring," Dr. J. T. Scott, plead not guilty asked a preliminary hearing and was held on $10,000 bond. He was caught after a chase thru Warren streets by deputy sheriffs.

Edna McCoy, the only one to plead guilty was bound over to the federal grand jury on $5,000 bond. All others plead not guilty and bond ranged from $2,500 to $7,500.

BARGAIN DAY IN BASEBALL MASON'S PARK

Newark Team Will Appear For a Double Header With the Eagles Sunday.

Circleville baseball fans will be given a bargain day on Sunday when the fast and hard hitting Newark team will appear at Mason's field for a double header with the Eagle team.

After the game played at Reynoldsburg two weeks ago the management of the Eagle team gave the aggregation a shaking up and several new faces will be seen in the line-up Sunday.

Among other changes which the fans will welcome was the signing of Catcher Targer, of Chillicothe, who will be in the receiving end of the battery Sunday. Targer needs no introduction to Circleville fans. He is not only a fine catcher and a good hitter, but is a genuine player and should put some pep in the local organization.

George Kanavel will pitch the first game and the other pitcher is promised to be equally good.

On account of the double bill the first game will be called at one o'clock so the fans will not be compelled to invent excuses for being late for supper.

The teams are all enthused and pep ped up and are promising to give the fans a sure enough treat Sunday by winning both games of the double header.

As this is the first at home game for a month and a bargain day double header, a large crowd is expected, one in fact which will tax the capacity of the ample field.

6,292,653 Autos Cross Bridge in 10 Months

Camden, N. J.—Statistics made public recently on the volume of automobile traffic handled by the Delaware river bridge linking Camden and Philadelphia indicate that the popularity of this route may liquidate the debt of this structure from three to eight years ahead of the estimated period.

The figures made public by the Delaware River Bridge commission show that 6,292,653 automobiles used this route during the first ten months.

It had been estimated that the traffic for the year would not exceed 6,000,000 machines.

NATIONAL TRACK AND FIELD MEET

Lincoln, Neb., June 29.--(UP.)—Vanguard of the nation's track and field stars, who will compete in the National A. A. U. track and field meet here July 1, 2 and 4, are expected to start arriving tomorrow.

Hundreds of athletes, representing athletic clubs and colleges from every section of the country, have been entered in this year's meet—a meet that is considered one of the chief tests for Olympic eligibility.

Considerable attention this year is being given to the athletic club entries. Main attention will be given the Olympic Club of Los Angeles, the Los Angeles A. C., the Hollywood A. C. and the Illinois Athletic Club.

Athletes on these squads will represent the best of the collegians for the past few years from the West Coast and from the middlewest. The Chicago A. A. will be entered but owing to the club's poor showing in the central division A. A. U. meet in Chicago it is not considered a likely team winner.

John Abernethy, of this city, will be a contestant in the St. Xavier College team.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

Of Mrs. Curtis Scott Unsolved by Family and Police.

Local police, the family and intimate friends of Mrs. Curtis Scott who disappeared from her home in East Franklin street June 15, are at a loss to explain her whereabouts. On that date Mrs. Scott left a note at her home saying that she had gone up town and one person is reported to have seen her going in that direction about 10 o'clock in the morning. There was nothing unusual in her attitude prior to her disappearance and she had never mentioned leaving home. Several meager clues, such as the disappearance of a revolver, gold pencil and glasses are being worked on but it is thought that she took none of the rest of her belongings.

Mrs. Scott was not in the best of health.

Police have notified the surrounding community of her disappearance and any information will be appreciated.

She was the wife of Curtis Scott, an employee of The Scioto Valley Traction Company. Two daughters, Misses Louise and Geneva, are at home.

How to choose wallpaper is the subject of a learned article in a recent magazine issue. Well, it seems some women choose it in about this way: They pick a pattern the rest of the family doesn't like and then, after it's on the wall, they find they don't really like it, while the rest of the family gets used to it.—Atchison Globe.

Grain Combines Reducing Costs

New Machine Materially Lowers Expense of Cutting and Threshing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Harvesting costs are reduced so materially by the use of the combined harvester-thresher, that this machine is rapidly replacing other harvesting machinery in the Great plains east of the Rocky mountains, according to a study just completed by the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Montana agricultural colleges. The advantages of this machine are in the lower cost of cutting and threshing grain, reduction in labor requirements and in shortening the harvesting and threshing periods.

East of the Rocky mountains a type of combine is in use which is considerably smaller than the kind formerly seen in California and in the Northwest states. Most of the new machines have a 15 or 16-foot cut, having auxiliary engines, and are drawn by tractors.

Reduces Amount of Labor.

Eight-foot combines harvested 275 acres of grain on the average, and 16-foot machines averaged 682 acres last season. Except where the grain was very heavy, the yield per acre had no appreciable effect on the rate of cutting. The minimum crew for a 15-foot or 16-foot combine is two men, not including grain haulers. Similar machines having a power drive from the tractor are sometimes operated by one man. It is estimated that the combine reduces the amount of labor necessary for harvesting and threshing in the Great plains from about 3.6 man hours per acre for cutting with the binder and threshing with a stationary machine to about 0.75 man hours per acre.

Operators of combines estimate the life of the machine to be about eight years. Their first cost ranges from about $1,000 for small machines to $2,500 for the larger sizes. Extended use of the machine during the harvesting season is essential to a low harvesting cost per acre. When the farmer has only a small acreage to cut, the investment and replacement charges of a combine may be too high.

To Make Combine Profitable.

In order to make the combine a profitable harvesting implement, the acreage to be cut must be greater than ordinarily cut with one binder. Harvesting with the combine, says the department, is not cheaper than with the binder and thresher unless 100 or more acres are available for cutting. There must be 150 or more acres available for cutting before costs with the combine fall below costs with a header and stationary thresher. This reckoning takes into account only the direct cash expenses ordinarily paid by the farmer, and the necessary replacement charges for the machines. The minimum acreage for more economical harvesting depends somewhat on the size of combine used.

Farmers in the Great plains allow grain to stand for five or seven days after it is ripe enough for binding before they begin harvesting with a combine. This unavoidable delay increases the risk from weather and shattering. Few farmers, however, consider the losses from shattering or bleaching to be serious in this area. Harvesting losses attributable to the machine itself are generally less with the combine than with other machines. Tests made show that properly adjusted combines separate grain as efficiently as many stationary threshers. Losses due to heads left on the ground in fields on which observations were made averaged 2.6 per cent of the total yield for the combine, 3.3 per cent for the header, and 6.1 per cent for the binder. A condensed report of the survey is contained in a preliminary report which may be obtained upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Agricultural Notes

The best milk is that which is kept clean, cool, and covered.

To keep the loafer here from eating up the profits, why not eat up the loafer hens?

Speaking of efficiency on the farm, consider the sheep as a triple-product machine—wool, lamb, soil fertility.

The farmer who grows his food and feed at home doesn't need to gamble quite so much on a questionable cash crop.

The value of the vegetables produced on 1-20th of an acre, which is the size of a small family garden, is about $50, according to a Cornell bulletin on gardening.

Buck lambs are now penalized so drastically on all the larger markets that one cannot afford to raise them, while tails on sheep went out of fashion when wet pastures came in.

COOPERATIVE MARKETING OF LIVESTOCK

The Leaders are in Chicago Where Problems are to be Very Freely Discussed.

A number of leaders of Ohio's cooperative livestock marketing organizations are in Chicago this week attending the sessions of the American Institute of Cooperation, according to word received from the officers of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation. Study livestock cooperation is being emphasized this week; the second of the four weeks of the institute sessions.

Prominent on this week's program, according to the announcement are L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Wool Growers' Cooperative association, E. C. Rector, director of the Ohio Livestock Cooperative association, M. L. Howell, manager of the Ohio Poultry Producers' Cooperative association and George Henning of Ohio State university's college of agriculture.

Mr. Henning and Mr. Rector are scheduled to tell some of the experiences and problems in livestock marketing in Ohio. During the week Ohio experience will be compared to that of more than 30 other states. Mr. Howell will tell of the work being done in cooperative poultry marketing in this state.

Mr. Palmer is to lead a discussion on problems of wool marketing. On Saturday he will meet a group of wool marketing leaders from all parts of the country to consider the combination of state and local wool cooperatives into five to seven district pools. Should this plan, which has been discussed for some time among wool growers, go into effect, the Ohio warehouse at Columbus would be made the headquarters for grading and storage of wools in this section.

CLEVE RADER HEADS BUCK-EYE TRAPSHOOTERS

Will Enter Team at Grand American Tournament at Vandalia.

J. C. Rader, of this city, heads the list in the Buck-Eye Trapshooters association with a record of 1073 broke out of 1100, or an average of .9754.

This is the greatest year in the history of the state, and fifteen marksmen average 95% or better. Texas comes next with seven. Rader visited the Ohio State shoot and broke 150 straight in the A class race to the tie-up with Charlie Young, the Springfield star. Charlie Bogert, Sandusky, takes second honors to date. Bogert has shot at 3500 clays, been fortunate in hearing the cry or "dead" 3410 times which gives him a mark of .9742. Charlie Young, the 1926 Grand American winner, is holding down third place with 97 flat on 3970 clays. George Statler, the brilliant Piqua gunner, closely follows Young with .9651. John Taylor, Newark, tops the professional gunners of the state with the great average of .9752. The Buck-Eye state will enter a strong team at the Grand American tournament which will be held at Vandalia the last week in August. The quintette will be composed of S. D. Geddes, Harrisburg, the 1927 Ohio State champion, Charles Young Springfield, Henry Shick, Huntsville, Charlie Bogert, Sandusky and C. R. Swartz, Kenton, Ohio, have a great chance to cop the Grand American State team honors this year. Last year the premier "five" that represented the state took third place.

Leap-Year ReckoningQuite Simple Matter

The year 1928 is a leap year, as it is divisible by four without remainder. There has been no change in the calendar for the last two centuries. As the exact length of a year, determined by the earth's revolution around the sun, is a little less than 365 1/4 days, the old Julian calendar, giving a leap year every four years, was inexact. A new calendar, called the Georgian, was proposed and adopted by most Christian nations in the sixteenth century or later, to rectify this error. This calendar provides for 97 leap years in each 400 years. The only difference from the Julian calendar is that century years, such as 1600, 1700, 1800, 1900, etc., are not leap years unless they are divisible by 400 without remainder. Thus 1600 and 2000 are leap years, while 1700, 1800 and 1900 are not leap years.

CENTENARY OF BOATING ON OHIO CANALS

Old Vessel May be Raised and Sailed to the Scene of Its Former Glory.

Fourteen years ago when the centennial of Perry's victory on Lake Erie was about to be celebrated, investigation proved that the commodore's old flag ship used on that historic occasion, was lying at the bottom of the bay at Erie, Pennsylvania where it sank soon after the notable battle—in recoverable condition, and the hull was raised, reconstructed, rigged and sailed to the scene of its former glory to be a feature of the centennial occasion.

And now that the centennial of an important peace-time event is to be celebrated, the sailing of the first canal boat on Ohio's system of canals, it is proposed to recover the canal boat that had this honor. It was on July 3, 1827, that "The Ohio" a canal boat bearing freight and passengers started from Akron on the newly completed first section of the Ohio & Erie canal, for Cleveland and reached Cleveland the following day.

Forty-four locks had to be negotiated and at every considerable port enroute, brief stops were made to receive popular ovations, the booming of cannon, speeches by officials and the cheering of the people. All who took part in that notable event or saw it, are of course gone, and the system of transportation then installed has been almost completely superseded by other and better systems but it served its day and generation well.

The hull of the old Ohio has been found in the mud of a basin in Coventry township, Summit county, where it was towed and sunk when no longer serviceable, and an attempt is to be made to float and restore it temporarily at least, to a navigable condition, for use in the centennial celebration.

A few years ago a portion of the stern of an old canal boat could be seen projecting above the mud in an abandoned and partly filled-up section of the canal near the foot of Mound street, Columbus. It may have been a contemporary craft with "The Ohio" and its framework might be recovered and reconditioned should occasion require.—J. H. Galbraith.

BIBLE ANTEDATED BY MANUSCRIPTSOlder Than Papyrus Found in Tomb of St. Cuthbert.

Washington.—Biblical manuscripts older even than the celebrated St. John's gospel according to St. John, said to have been found in the tomb of St. Cuthbert, who died in 687, are on exhibition in the United States.

One of the collections, bequeathed to the nation by Charles L. Freer of Detroit, is in the Freer Gallery of Art here. The other, comprising a few papyrus fragments, is at the University of Michigan.

The "Washington Manuscripts," as the Freer collection is known, include one of the oldest Greek versions of the Bible known. Its date is placed in the fourth century by Dr. E. A. Lowe, Oxford lecturer, and research investigator of the Carnegie institutions.

Considerable attention has been drawn to the "Washington Manuscripts," Doctor Lowe pointed out, because they carry the following extra verses after Mark 16:14:

"But they defended themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under the power of Satan, who does not permit those made impure by evil spirits to comprehend the truth and power of God. Therefore reveal now thy righteousness, they said to Christ. And Christ replied to them that the limit of the years of the power of Satan has been made full, but other dread events are near at hand, and in behalf of those who had sinned I was delivered unto death in order that they may return to the truth and no longer sin, to the end that they may inherit the spiritual and imperishable glory of righteousness, which is in heaven."

In addition to the Greek parchment manuscript, one of the gospels, Psalms, Deuteronomy, Joshua and fragments of the epistles of Paul, the collection includes a few pages of ancient papyrus bearing parts of the minor prophets. All were found in Egypt. Freer acquired them through a dealer.

'Tis not what man does which exalts him, but what man would do.—Robert Browning.

No well-informed person has declared a change of opinion to be inconsistency.—Cicero.

Man is never watchful enough against dangers that threaten him every hour.—Horace.

Early ancient writing was so unnatural that there is no record that anybody ever laughed.

Too great refinement is false delicacy, and true delicacy is solid refinement.—La Rochefoucauld.

Embarrassing Answer

Mr. and Mrs. will be sufficient identification of two Irvington parents who have a great amount of pride in their bright-eyed little daughter.

Recently they took the little girl with them on a visit to Gas City, where they formerly lived.

While there she was the center of attraction.

"Where is mamma's girl?" she was asked.

Quickly she responded by patting herself on the head.

"Whose girl are you?" was another question.

"Mamma's," was the answer.

"Well, where is daddy's girl?" came another question.

French Thrift

One of the outstanding characteristics of French thrift is the degree to which holdings of bonds and stocks are disseminated throughout the various elements of the population. A recent report of the federation of holders of securities shows that state securities are held by 1,320,000 persons and railroad securities by 950,000. These figures seem the more extraordinary when it is recalled that in France there are less than 12,000,000 families.

Curious Bird

More than 300 different kinds of birds were brought from South America by Ludlow Griscom of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. One of the most curious in the collection is the motmot. "This bird," says Griscom, "bites its own tail. It is green and so closely resembles the color of the leaves that one can only see it by looking for the side-to-side movement of its tail, which resembles a pendulum in regularity."

Sea Elephants Going Fast

Sea elephants, which at one time abounded in large numbers off the coast of California and Lower California, were in 1912 estimated as numbering only 150 on the island of Gaudalupe. A recent expedition from San Diego to the same island found the herd to consist of 450. The government of Mexico is doing its utmost to preserve this species.

Line Wrecked by Tree

Electric power lines are subject to all sorts of attacks. This spring a large tree, frozen upright in moving ice on the Merrimac river, raked down three cross-river cables near Suncock, N. H. Electricity for the nearby towns was routed over another line temporarily so that service was not interrupted.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period in France beginning about March, 1793, when the revolutionary tribunal was appointed, and ending in July, 1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates. During this time a great number of persons, principally of the aristocracy, were executed.

Synthetic Sleep

The Germans have invented a sleep-machine which nerve specialists commend to insomnia victims. It is a small box that emits a humming sound like a hive of bees. It is timed to hum for 40 minutes and then to fade out, figuratively speaking. The principle of it is the same as that of mother's rocking chair with its wordless songs.—Los Angeles Times.

WOMAN'S ACT THAT SAVED KING'S LIFE

History refers to the unfortunate inauguration of masquerades at the court of Charles VI as the "Burning Ballet." This famous dance was held January 29, 1393, in connection with a festival in the royal palace at Paris. The desire of a certain gentleman to create a sensation by having a dance of wild men to please the women resulted in the selection of King Charles and four of his nobles to participate in the revel.

They had themselves sewn up in tight-fitting linen suits covered with resin, on which a quantity of tow was glued. In this guise they performed their weird dance. The duke of Orleans, in attempting to discover their identity, approached too near one of them with a lighted taper. The tow caught fire and the flames quickly enveloped the luckless performers. The king was saved from death by the presence of mind of one of the women, who enveloped him in the lengthy train attached to her gown. The shock, however, proved too great, and he never fully recovered.—Kansas City Star.

How they hated him, and yet no public figure, save Washington, was so adored. Men were either Alexander Hamilton's frenzied enemies or else his unswerving followers. His flaming personality left no middle ground. From the day that he came to America from the West Indies, sent by charitable subscriptions to receive an education, genius set him apart from his fellows.

A boy of twenty, serving a gun, even the reserved Washington was won to him at once, and made him his military secretary; generals received his counsel eagerly, and congress covered before the lash of his tongue and pen.

Born out of wedlock, he moved as royally as a prince of the blood; fashioned with the exquisiteness of a Greek carving, his face was only saved from beauty by its strength; and that proud heiress, Betty Schuyler, had given him her hand in gladness.—From "Sons of the Eagle," by George Creel.

"Collette," Their Mascot

(Copyright.)

HAD Paula been a tiny black Persian kitten like the one in the basket beside her, she would have purred, too. She was so happy to have finally succeeded in buying the pet she was now taking home on the Long Island train with her that she could actually have purred with joy. For many weeks she had been looking for a small black kitten and only that day while out at lunch had come across this adorable one.

Having nothing whatever in the office that she and her brother occupied with which to make the kitten's basket soft and warm, Paula had been obliged to use one of the office supply towels.

She had already named the kitten after the small patented article for which she and her brother had acquired the agency, which was already bringing them a decent living. Little "Collette" was to be their mascot.

Paula peeped into the cozy basket and as she did so a small girl sat down in the seat beside her. The man who had found the seat for the child found one for himself in front.

There was no slightest doubt that the small girl was feeling very fearful about something. Paula heard an occasional trembling breath as if she were making a brave effort to stifle her emotions.

Paula's first thought was to make an effort to amuse the little girl, and she very cautiously opened the lid of "Collette's" basket. The kitten was curled up into a perfect puff ball of silky black fur.

"Oh!" cried the little girl with startling interest, "a little kitty!" She snuggled against Paula and leaned her head down so that she could almost rub her cheek against the kitten. "My daddy promised me one for my birthday and we have tried all day to get one and couldn't—get—a—single kitten." With that the tears burst forth.

"What would your daddy say to me if I gave you this one?" questioned Paula. "I should love to make you a present of it but you must name it 'Collette.' Do you think—"

"Oh—h!" gasped the delighted child. "I would just love—"

The man in front turned and entered into this strange conversation. "My dear Tots—you mustn't let the lady give you her own kitten."

"I should love to give the kitten to your little girl. I can easily get another tomorrow, as he is one of a big litter. Please let her have it—children's disappointments are so very real to them."

The train was pulling in at Forest Hills station and Paula pressed the basket with "Collette" in it into the happy child's arms. "Be sure you name her 'Collette,'" she said swiftly, and only the searching eyes of the all-wise kitten saw the look in Paula's own eyes as she bade swift farewell to her pet.

Paula felt forlorn as she walked home from the station with the two pink china bowls she had bought for "Collette's" milk and boiled fish. She recalled the very happy light in the child's eyes when she accepted the kitten and that cheered her a bit.

And if Tots Blaine was treasuring her kitten tremendously, so also was John Blaine treasuring it because it was the golden thread whereby his heart had been tugged into heretofore unknown regions.

And John Blaine's only hope for the future was that he might again see the girl on the train so that he could easily and without any offense thank her again.

But "Collette," in her cozy basket, had other plans for the bringing together of a couple in a more speedy manner.

Of course "Collette" knew that John Blaine was not the father of Tots, nor in any way, shape or form tied up matrimonially. He was just Tots' best uncle. So plans proceeded when "Collette" almost refused to come out of her cozy basket after arriving at her new home and being made much of by an animal-loving family. She went back and forth in her basket, went round and round in cat fashion on that office towel which Paula had used for a cushion for her, and it was not until John Blaine himself seemed to grasp the idea that she seemed pleased and purred loudly.

Blaine took the towel into his own possession and first thing in the morning trailed to the office whose name was written in red letters thereon. He mustn't lose any time in returning it—not in the least that he cared about the towel-supply people—but he did not want to miss a moment more of life without knowing Paula.

She was sitting beside a great desk occupied by a man whom Blaine instantly disliked, then as quickly admired when he found it was her brother.

"I had to return this towel," said Blaine. "I didn't want you to get in trouble for losing it," and he grinned openly.

Tricks and Snares to Induce People to Buy.

Likening the morals pertaining to salesmanship to the twelfth verse in the seventh chapter of Matthew, Harvey R. Young, advertising director of The Dispatch, addressed members attending the International Advertising association convention at Denver, Colorado, Sunday evening from the pulpit of Cameron Methodist church on the subject of "Morals of Salesmanship."

"There are several definitions for the words 'morals' and 'ethics,' but so far as morals pertaining to salesmanship are concerned, the Biblical verse, 'Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them for this is law' and the prophet offers a plainer and simpler definition than those found in dictionaries," Young declared.

Salesmanship and advertising are closely linked together. Successful selling as well as advertising must be built on confidence. When confidence is destroyed business will suffer," he continued, pointing out that two classes of salesmen, the class which disparages a competitive salesman and the class which makes sales thru misrepresentation, destroys confidence.

"The greatest sales manager the world has ever known was our Savior Jesus Christ, who more than 2000 years ago was the forerunner of truth and with his staff of salesmen, the twelve apostles, laid the foundation, for the moral upbuilding of the world, which will go on forever.

"Good salesmanship no longer involves a series of tricks and snares to induce people to buy."

Many of the failures of sales people of today is due to the fact that they neither develop their possibilities nor have any future object in view, according to Mr. Young, who further declared that a salesman to be successful must possess an inflexible purpose.

MOONSHINE IS CAPTURED ON EAST MAIN

A raid was made Wednesday afternoon at the home of Oscar Evans, better known as "Rube" Evans, who lives in the flat over Beck's meat market. Officers Warner, Fitzpatrick and McCrady, with a search warrant, raided the place and found three pint flasks, one full, and the other two about half full of some kind of decoction known to the trade as "Moonshine."

Out in front stood a brand new Essex car and in this was a case of sixteen pints of the same stuff packed securely in a pasteboard container. A lap robe was thrown over the case to hide it from view. The whisky and car were confiscated by the police and was taken to the city hall.

Evans was placed under arrest and appeared in court this morning pleading guilty to possession of intoxicating liquor and was given a fine of $300 and costs amounting to $311.20 which he paid and was discharged. Evans was represented by M. C. Seyfert Jr. The Essex machine which was in Mr. Evans' possession was not confiscated as the American Finance company claims ownership.

AMUSEMENTS

Director Frank Lloyd has made another remarkable picture for Paramount with the inspired Esther Ralston, Gary Cooper, Einar Hanson and Norman Trevor.

"Children of Divorce," now playing at the Met theater, tears a new slash in the veil covering the evils of modern divorce and pictures in bold colors life in the youthful ranks of the wealthy social class.

The cast headed by Clara Bow and Esther Ralston, both of whom are starred, and Einar Hanson and handsome young Gary Cooper, give wonderfully fine consistent performances.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Miss Bow as the girl who forces marriage on the man of her choice (Cooper) in spite of his love for Esther Ralston. Miss Ralston, in Esther Ralston, in turn, as lovely, dignified Jean Waddington, suffers her disappointment contagiously as she found ready sympathy flowing from the audience that saw the picture on the opening night here.

Miss Bow, Miss Ralston and Mr. Cooper in their big scene where Jean learns that Kitty and Ted have been married during a night of revelry, rise to the historic heights as actresses and actor. Theirs were parts that might well have been given more experienced players, but their youth stood them in good stead and even added to the appeal of the characterizations.

Taken all in all, "Children of Divorce" couldn't possibly have been other than a good picture. Owen Johnson wrote the story. Remember his "Stover at Yale" and "The Enemy Sex?" Frank Lloyd translated it to the screen. The four leading players and a fine supporting cast carry it thru and when one has Norman Trevor, Hedda Hopper, Edward Martindel and Julia Swayne Gordon in support, you have nothing less than the best that's to be obtained!

Country Without Trees

Iceland is assigned to the Western hemisphere. It is a large, volcanic and treeless island in the North Atlantic ocean. Its most northern point is 66 degrees 33 minutes north latitude. Its estimated area is 40,497 square miles, so that Iceland is somewhat larger than Ireland. The population numbers 95,000. The capital of Iceland is Reykjavik, containing a population of about 20,000.

Mythology's Meaning

Mythology may be described as a collection of fables and traditions referring to the forces of nature, to national heroes and to the pagan gods. The nature-myths are primitive attempts to explain the processes of nature, and may be looked upon as the beginning of natural science. The heromys are akin to sacred mythology.

New Idea in "Movies"

At eighty-six years of age, Mrs. Sarah Patek of San Francisco, Calif., is the star in a one-reel moving picture. Relatives in England wanted to see her, but she was unable to visit them, so she arranged to have a moving picture taken of her in her home, to be sent to England. Supporting the star were her four surviving children, ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

CODFISH LIVERS
RIVAL SUN RAYS

Scientists Point Benefits to Es Derived From Use
of Sea Food.

Philadelphia.—Shades of Apollo and Icarus! Here is science claiming that the only rival of the sun is found in "a poor fish."

We know that Sir Walter Scott sang once to the effect that "It's no' fish ye're buying—it's men's lives." We remember also the lines of an old Scotch song, a fishmonger's call in which a similar prophetic note was sounded. "Wha'll buy my caller herin'?" the cry runs. "Ye little ken their worth."

One hundred years after these words rang out in the chill, foggy air of Scottish markets, scientists step from their laboratories long enough to tell us that, next to the sun, "desparin' wives and mithers" must depend upon a fish to maintain the stalwart limbs and stout backbone of the nation's youth.

In those few remaining regions of the earth where clothes are incidental, if not negligible, where the sun is given its chance to feed the bodies of men, we find, as a rule, that the natives of such Edens are straight as an arrow, well formed, strong, and happy.

It is when we reach civilization that we encounter frequent deformities, bowed legs, gawky knees, bulging wrists and ankles.

Clothes Rob Man of Sun.

The fact that we free to the sun only the few square inches of our face and the backs of ungloved hands is a primary factor in the general tendency in this and other civilized countries toward rachitic conditions. The average infant is too much over-clothed when lying in the sun to derive its full benefits. Sun porches are light, cheery, and warm; but unless their glass is of a special type none of the helpful ultra-violet rays of the sun make their way inside.

Without sufficient sunlight or without sufficient supply in another form of the factor that is conveyed by the sun's rays, our children develop rickets, that starvation of bone structures that leaves them soft and flexible, producing various forms of deformity, including soft teeth, misshapen skulls, jaws and skeletal structures, and even constricted chests.

The elements that give proper strength to bones and teeth are calcium and phosphorus. These two elements cannot be utilized in bone growth, however, unless a third factor is present, just as a pile of coal is useless without ignition to convert it into heat.

Like Bones Made of Rubber.

This factor is vitamin D. Without this vitamin, calcium phosphate cannot be deposited sufficiently in the bony structures of the body. Although bones keep right on growing, the unfortunate child to whom they belong might as well have a rubber skeleton if the vitamin deficiency is not corrected.

The action of the ultra-violet rays of the sun upon one of the fatty components of our skin produces vitamin D or its physiological equivalent, according to researches conducted by Huldchinsky, Hess, Shipley, and other scientists.

Sunlight, then, is the natural protection against rickets.

But civilized man does not lead a natural life. Our mode of dressing and dwelling does not permit natural living. And it is not likely that we shall emulate the Polynesian soon by discarding our clothing for bared existence under a beneficent sun.

When it is known how important vitamin D is to life and health, it seems an odd prank of nature that this factor is absent in practically all foods used for human consumption except the liver of codfish. Probably nature felt that she was taking ample care of us by giving us sunlight. Then she permitted man to discover for himself how prodigally she provides for his welfare by storing this valuable factor in one of his commonest sources of food.

Just how the cod manages to distinguish himself above all other animals of earth, sea and sky by monopolizing the storage of vitamin D is not clearly determined. One theory of scientists has it that the ultra-violet rays of the sun penetrate below the surface of the ocean and so irradiate the cod. This would presuppose that the cod's skin is especially sensitized to these rays as man's skin seems to be. Just as if both cod and man were photographic negatives which, upon exposure to ultra-violet rays, produce a positive effect when developed in the chemistry of the body.

It is more likely, however, that the cod gets his sunlight by eating it. Study of the habits of the cod in Norwegian waters and in the waters off Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Maine have strengthened this theory. F. F. Berg of the Squibb laboratories watched the early spring surge of thousands of cod to the shallower, warmer waters near the Lofoten islands, where they came to spawn.

At this period of a cod's life he develops a ravenous appetite. And it is what nature provides to satisfy that hunger that offers another theory in explanation of the fact that cod liver oil is the most prolific source of vitamin D known to man.

Piscatorial Drama.

This piscatorial drama is very much like the "house that Jack built." Great shoals of herring are loosed by nature into the waters near Norway and our northeastern coast just as the cod feels these pangs of hunger. So here is the cod that gives us vitamins. Here are the squid that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us vitamins. Here are the mosses and sea plants that are eaten by the squid that are eaten by the herring that are eaten by the cod that gives us vitamins.

Day after day, week upon week, the sun pours its rays down upon these sea plants. The squid themselves do little more than float around near the surface of the sea, absorbing still more ultra-violet rays. From that point on it is obvious how, theoretically, the codfish acquires his vast store of vitamin D by literally eating sunshine.

It has been only a few years since the existence of vitamin D was recognized. In fact, its identification came about through experiments by Prof. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university with cod-liver oil. From that moment, the medical profession moved with reinforced courage against the threat of rickets. The late Dr. Emmet Holt, at the time of his death, was stressing the importance of dependence of sound health in adult life upon building bones, blood and muscles in childhood.

Would Reduce Teeth Ills.

It is claimed that, if the perfect condition of bone, blood and muscle in new-born children had been maintained in the last century through sufficient vitamin D supply, dental statistics would not show that 98 per cent of the people of the United States have imperfect teeth. There would have been less excuse for rheumatism and heart and kidney troubles, which are, in fact, after-effects of some local infection.

Authorities are urging that the growing generation of children be granted the heritage that is their right under the sun. Plenty of sunlight is advocated, but, at best, the sun alone under modern living conditions cannot assure sufficient vitamin D for a stout-limbed posterity.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, states in a recent article:

"One of the greatest discoveries of the last five years has been the establishing of the fact that cod-liver oil has specific properties in preventing the development of bone diseases of infancy and in aiding proper growth. Under the unforgotten encouragement of the medical profession, child welfare agencies have preached the doctrine of liberal administration of cod-liver oil in infancy." Doctor Fishbein's article also stated that the council on pharmacy and chemistry of the American Medical association agreed upon advising "routine administration of cod-liver oil to all growing infants provided the product had been standardized as to its actual potency."

Every Wharf Had Its Keg.

Long before we had knowledge of vitamins, cod-liver oil was used. Coast dwellers and seafaring folk drank it in quantities as a means for withstanding exposure to cold weather and as a tonic. Their method of extracting it was crude. Every wharf had its keg sitting in the sun, the barrel full of cod livers, the oil separating and rising to the top where it was skimmed off.

Modern methods of rendering oil include establishment of plants near enough to the fishing banks so that livers may be received fresh from the catch with a minimum of vitamin loss through exposure to the air.

From a modest position as a by-product of the fishing industry, the securing of livers for their oil is assuming an important and valuable major position. It is estimated that the world's output of cod-liver oil in 1925 was approximately 2,500,000 gallons, or 94,000 barrels of 30 gallons each. When it is known that it takes about six tons of codfish to yield enough liver to produce one barrel of cod-liver oil, some idea can be gathered of the gain that thousands of fishing families experience as a result of the laboratory discovery of vitamin D.

More Vitamin A Than Milk.

While cod-liver oil is essential chiefly for its content of vitamin D, the fact that it is also a rich storehouse of vitamin A is by way of being a bonus that nature has thrown in for good measure. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance against pulmonary infections, colds, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and the like. It is as essential as vitamin D, and the complete absence of one or the other generally results fatally. Vitamin A, unlike vitamin D, is present in other foods, principally in butter from cows that have been fed on green food, in milk and cream, and in green vegetables such as spinach.

When it is known, however, that one pint of cod-liver oil is as rich in vitamin A as at least 1,200 pints of the best grade A milk, the greater concentration of the factor in oil becomes apparent.

Knowing that only two sources of the vital vitamin D exist, how truly we may say that a poor fish is elevated to a position where it alone vies with the sun in the service that both render mankind. It is in this service that hundreds of thousands of men are fishing the seas for better babies. With the promise of a sturdier race through ample access to the essential vitamin D, we may well sing along with Sir Walter Scott, "It's no' fish ye're buying; it's men's lives."

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woollen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

Priced from $16.50 up

Haven't you often wished that you had a folding chair to take with you on picnics and camping tours? We have some that are very fine for that purpose. They fold up into a small space, yet are comfortably lazy. They are very handy around the house when guests arrive, especially for use on the porch. They are strong, holding the largest persons, and yet are low priced.

They start at $4.25

THRIFT MUST BE STABILIZED AND DEVELOPED

Don't Live or Save Beyond Your Means, is a Safe Rule.

There is little or no value in sporadic economy. To save for a while only to squander later when temptation proves too strong, is of no benefit whatever.

Those who have succeeded in developing habits of thrift have schooled themselves first of all to save systematically. A certain amount put aside each day, each week or each month will do wonders in stabilizing one's methods of life and stimulating personal progress.

Those who make resolves to begin saving money and then fail to live up to their resolutions are generally the victims of poor planning. They either try to save more than they should or they do not plan on saving a certain amount daily, weekly or monthly.

Don't try to live beyond your means. Don't try to save beyond your means.

There are rightful and necessary demands made upon every individual. If we try to save too much, especially if we are beginners in thrift, we may fail.

The amount to be saved is a matter of adjustment. The man who has never saved money will find that he can save more the second year on the same income than he was able to save the first. This is because, with the development of thrift habits, he not only finds it easier to restrict his extravagances and unessentials, but he finds his efficiency increased. He develops short cuts. He learns that, with ingenuity, he can attain the same results often at less cost than when he was not under such self-discipline.

Goethe observed that "enthusiasm is of the greatest value when we are not carried away by it." This can be applied to saving money as well as to everything else in life.

Even in thrift there is harm in over-enthusiasm.

Plan your savings along lines commensurate with your income and the conditions of life about you.

BIG REUNION ORPHAN HOME THREE DAYS

The annual reunion of the alumni and students of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans Home at Xenia, will be held this year at the home on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 3, 4 and 5.

Unusual preparations for the entertainment of guests have been made. The exercises will be largely of a patriotic character but attention will be paid to the wonderful work the school has done and the high position in life many of the alumni have secured.

There is not a county in the state or a state in the Union where graduates of the school have not settled. A number have gone to foreign countries and attained places of prominence.

The attendance is to be the largest in the history of these reunions and from two to three hundred will be present. Some are making the trip from foreign lands to be present. One of two speakers of prominence are to be secured and addresses will be delivered every day by men and women of prominence.

E. W. Hughes, parliamentarian of the state legislature, a graduate of the Home has charge of the arrangements and is preparing the program.

"Pickling" in Paraffin Saves Museum Groups

New York.—"If you think we're waxworks," he said, "you ought to pay, you know. Waxworks weren't made to be looked at for nothing. Nowhow!"

Alice's dilemma would no doubt have been considerably increased had she encountered beings who looked very real and almost alive, and yet were indubitably waxworks, in the literal sense of being completely sculptured in wax. This is exactly what two workers at the American Museum of Natural History have done.

G. K. Noble and M. E. Jaekle, confronted with the troublesome fact that frogs and toads and spotted salamanders and all manner of other interesting but nonfur-bearing creatures cannot be successfully stuffed and mounted by the ordinary methods of taxidermists, have solved the problem by literally pickling them in solid paraffin wax. They first remove all trace of water from the specimens by appropriate chemical means, arrange the little animals in natural positions and soak them for several days or weeks in melted paraffin, until every tissue is thoroughly impregnated and you cannot tell where the flesh ends and the paraffin begins.

By this method reptiles and amphibians can be worked into naturalistic museum groups and made as "alive" looking as birds and fur-bearing animals, instead of being pallid corpses pickled in jars of alcohol. They keep their natural colors indefinitely, except that sometimes their eyes need to be touched up with a little gold paint.

Red Hair Not So Good

In the hope of exterminating or lessening what they considered a curse, the Egyptians, in the time of the Ptolemies, used to burn a red-haired maiden once a year, so violently opposed were they to hair of a red hue, says the New York Herald-Tribune.
